CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)

— Keep an eye on India.

If that country is under drought conditions in May and June this year, the corn belt and the eastern U.S. will be rainy and cool during the corn season.

But if India is dry in May and June, then we could see a severe drought in 1993.

"If India is having a drought in May and June of this year, I can bet you that we'll have a more nearly normal growing season in the corn belt," said Dr. Louis M. Thompson, emeritus associate dean of agriculture at Iowa State University.

Thompson spoke on Tuesday to about 200 corn producers at the 1992 Pennsylvania Corn Conference.

Global warming

Thompson presented research on the factors of global warming and how warming and cooling cycles go hand in hand with corn prices and the economy.

Thompson centered on the factors caused by the El Nino — a WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.)—With emphasis on the theme that the Chesapeake Bay starts in Pennsylvania, Gov. Robert Casey and Maryland's Gov. William Scheafer visited a Lancaster County farm Monday to trumpet the success and future needs of the program.

Using Spring Lawn Farm, owned by the David and Joe Garber families, as a backdrop, Casey assured Scheafer that Pennsylvania was aware of the role his state played in the Bay clean-up program.

"I want to reaffirm Pennsylvania's commitment to stand by Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia to work together toward the goal of a 40 percent reduction in nutrients in the Bay by the year 2000," Casey said. "Spring Lawn farm is a model of good stewardship of our natural resources. We have seen clean-up efforts here today.

Association Applauds Family Farms Addresses Industry Concerns

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Poultry Progress Days held at the Farm and Home Center on Thursday addressed concerns of the industry and applauded poultry producers who have continued family poultry farms for two generations or more.

"Poultry families exemplify strength and leadership in agriculture," Jay Irwin, county Extension director emeritus, told the group as he identified the eight families who received Poultry Family Spirit awards.

Four generations

For four generations the Dennis L. and Ellen Eby farm in Gap and the Dennis Forry farm in Manheim have raised chickens.

The Eby farm was purchased in 1903 by Martin Eby who started with a couple of hundred chicks, cows, steers, sheep, and pigs. Hundreds of chicks ran around in the backyard until the late 1940s when son Menno housed 2,000 chicks on the farm. The family grew their own pullets, and washed and graded the eggs that were shipped

Gov. Robert Casey addresses the press conference at Spring Lawn Farm at New Danville in Lancaster County on Monday morning. In addition to numerous television, radio and press representatives, the David and Joe Garber families hosted Casey, Maryland Governor William Scheafer, and other officials of the Chesapeake Bay program. In the photo taken by the calf barn with Casey are Shirley, Kendall, David, Charise, Joe, Yvonne and Josiah Garber. Photo by Everett Newswanger, Managing Editor.

N.E. Chicken Parts

March 4, 1992

Trucklot buying interest was good for whole breasts, fairly good for boneless skinless breast cutlets and leg quarters, fair for the balance. Supplies of breast cutlets were adequate for today's needs with most of the trades reported at higher prices. However, the trade sentiment was unsettled with some asking higher prices for tomorrow's product and others calling the market "Toppy". Line run breasts were irregularly distributed but all trading was reported at higher prices. Leg quarters were adequate for a good call at steady prices. Wings were available but buying interest improved for next week.

Delmarva Broiler Fryer

March 4, 1992

Movement of ready-to-cook broiler fryers was slow to fair at best. Supplies were ample and excess product was difficult to place. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged to 1 cent lower at 46 to 57 cents. Live supplies were moderate to heavy. Weights were mixed and mostly desirable. Processing schedules were heavy. Trade sentiment was barely steady to weak. In the parts complex demand had slowed on all items and supplies were generally adequate.

Oklahoma City Feeder Cattle

March 4, 1992

Compared with last week: Feeder cattle and calves closed mostly steady to $1.00 higher. Market opened weak early Monday but gained *momentum thruout the trading period to close higher. Trade active. Demand very good with several outside buying interests competing aggressively for large run. This weeks run is the largest in three years at the Oklahoma National. Flesh condition rather thick on feeders and more reminiscent of May feeders off wheat as March feeders are generally not near as fleshy. Weigh condition less attractive to buyers with cattle on fuller end of scale. Cattle are exiting wheat pastures a few weeks early due to fast wheat growth causing wheat toxicity in cattle. Slaughter cows Cutter and Boning Utility (thin) steady; fleshy cows and Canners $2.00 lower. Demand good for thin cows; only fair for larger supply of fat cows. Slaughter bulls under good demand and $1.00-$2.00 up. Receipts this week 20,922; last week 17,218; last year 16,210. Supply includes 80 percent yearlings; 18 percent calves and stockers under 600 lbs.; 2 percent cows and bulls. Bulk price ranges follow:

ALMANAC

MARCH 9-15, 1992

"BEWARE THE IDES OF MARCH"

Of course, the "Ides of March" was bad luck for Julius Caesar, who was assassinated on March 15, 44 B.C., but even earlier, people regarded the ides (the 13th or 15th depending on the month) as unlucky. Other unlucky days in the Roman republican calendar were the calends (first of the month) and the nones (nine days before the ides).

Although the calendar was reformed in 46 B.C. by Julius himself, the notion of unlucky days continued. In the 1816 Old Farmer's Almanac we find these days transformed into old women whose breath is poisonous. "Old mother Calind took the lead, next went the Nones, and last the Ides followed. To whatsoever was true, honest or of good report, their breath was as blasting and mildew. These monsters are now no more, but they so leavened the world with their abominable practices that their influence will never be eradicated."

Thunder in March, fruitful but sorrowful year.

TIP OF THE WEEK

EARTHWISE

Caustic drain cleaners may work wonders on your clogged drain, but they wreak havoc on the environment. If an old-fashioned plunger won't clear your drain, try this non-toxic recipe: Pour 1/2 cup baking soda, 1/2 cup salt, and 1/4 cup vinegar down the drain, in that order. Close the drain until the fizzing stops, then flush with boiling water. Remember to use a drain sieve to trap hair and objects and prevent clogging.

ORANGE SCONES

Combine first five ingredients. Cut in butter with pastry blender until mixture forms coarse crumbs. Add raisins and toss. Add egg and buttermilk, stir just until mixture holds together. (Dough will be sticky, if dry, add another tablespoon of buttermilk.) Knead 8-10 times on a floured board. Gently pat into 9" circle. Cut into 12 wedges and place on a cookie sheet. Bake at 400° F for about 12 minutes, until golden. Serve warm with butter and marmalade. Makes 12 scones.

1 1/2 cups flour
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
2 teaspoons grated orange peel
1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup golden raisins
1 egg, lightly beaten
1/4 cup buttermilk

NORTHEAST:

OPINION

Correct An Economic Discrepancy

Talk about the cost of health care is a popular subject these days. In the United States we have the most advanced technology and the best physicians and specialists. But our health care system is the most expensive in the world.

Why this is true or who or what is to blame we cannot say. But we can say that farmers are in need of the proposed tax break on the money they spend for health insurance premiums.

Along with failing crops and falling markets, farmers also face the family's health care as a major concern. Like everyone, farm families find it harder to deal with the rising costs.

But more specifically, it is not fair that urban neighbors who are corporate or government employees receive health insurance tax free, while farmers are taxed on the money they use to pay for health insurance.

It's nothing for a health care policy to cover a farm family to cost $4,000 per year. Farmers understand the consequences that come from choosing a career where free health insurance is not offered. But they should not be penalized because of this choice.

The urban neighbor is not taxed on the $4,000 value of his policy that is provided as a company benefit. Farmers should not be required to pay tax for health policies either. The playing field needs to be leveled to treat all people the same regardless if they are provided insurance or purchase it themselves.

Many proposals in Congress deal with the issue of a 100 percent tax deduction for health insurance premiums for farmers and others who buy their own health insurance. The tax laws need to be changed to allow this deduction.

This will correct at least one economic discrepancy between rural and urban neighbors.

Farm Forum

Editor,

I applaud your Feb. 29, 1992 Lancaster Farming Opinion. Agriculture does need to be a vital part of Pa.'s public school curriculums. But I'm afraid that the State Board of Education will most likely lend a deaf ear to the farming communities legitimate concerns. I traveled to Harrisburg on Feb. 27th for the meeting concerning proposed changes in chapters 3, 5 and 6 of the new state regulations. Many concerned citizens, parents and grandparents made the trip from all parts of the state, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Erie to name a few. Probably well over 200 of us showed up but only a small room which seated 80 people was provided. Even though a larger room which could have accommodated us was available the meeting site was not moved. A PA system was set up in the hallway for the overflow to listen in on the proceedings. It was obvious by the board members attitudes and lack of willingness to answer questions of legitimate concerns that they had all ready decided and the meeting was a mere formality. The proposed "learning outcomes" of the regulations will not only leave PA's children woefully ignorant as to the importance of agriculture to our state and nation but also of our history, language, sciences, and literature and culture. Academics are being replaced by values clarification, psychological manipulation and "politically correct" attitudes and

To Consider Using Varying Corn Maturities

Using a variety of corn maturities should lessen weather stress and crop failure potential.

Extreme heat and dry weather during corn pollination will sizzle corn yields. Protection against weather stress may be minimized by increasing the length of time the corn crop will be pollinating.

By planting several hybrids of varying maturity days, growers will extend the time the crop is silking and pollinating. In extremely hot weather, silks will emerge later than the tassel and the pollen may die before it reaches the silks.

When planting different maturing varieties, it is best to plant them in different fields. Research has shown yields are usually higher when each variety is grown separate rather than when grown in a mixture.

Remember, this practice will also spread the harvest over a longer period of time.

To Properly Ground Electric Fences

When it comes to electric fence-

ing, you cannot have too many ground rods. Sometimes one will work, but three is better.

Why? When an animal touches the fence, the electricity must travel through the animal into the soil, then through the soil to a ground rod, and finally up the ground rod to the fence charger where the circuit is completed. Only then does the animal feel the shock.

Therefore, the more ground rods, the more electricity gets back to the fence charger. That is why the best ground system consists of three galvanized ground rods at least six feet deep and spaced 10 feet apart. Always use clamps to attach your ground wire to the ground rods.

Remember, your electric fence is only as good as its ground system.

To Study Competitiveness

Dr. David Kohl, professor of agricultural economics at Virginia Tech, has made the following observations at winter meetings:

- Fixed costs is one of the United States' farmers biggest weakness in global competition.

- A business should require less than 80 cents to generate a dollar's worth of income.

- Invest 25 percent of your margins or excess earnings outside the industry of agriculture.

- Medical costs will be the biggest expense threat on the cash flow statement.

- Technology wave will hit agriculture in the mid-1990s.

- Only one out of every four farmers will be able to adapt technology in the future because of financial and labor limitations.

If you want to stay in agriculture, you need to be paying close attention to your financial records, controlling costs, improving productivity, purchasing health insurance, and making the best use of your time. The decisions you make today will determine your competitiveness.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Chance favors the prepared mind."

Background Scripture: Mark 2:23 through 3:6.

Devotional Reading: Psalms 18:20-30.

There aren't many places in the gospels where Jesus is angry, but Mark tells us clearly of one such instance: "And he looked around at them with anger, grieved at their hardness of heart" (3:5). To me, the amazing thing is not that Jesus got angry on this occasion, but that there were so many others when he did not get angry. So we need to pay attention to what it is that makes him angry.

In Mark 3, it is the attitude of the Pharisees toward the commandments. Previously, they were deeply critical of him because he permitted his disciples to pluck and eat grain as they walked through grain fields on the sabbath. That was work and work on the sabbath was a profanation of it. Later, in the synagogue, a similar criticism was leveled against Jesus because he healed a man with a withered hand on the sabbath. The attitude of the Pharisees was simple and clear up to a point: healing was work and therefore a violation of the sabbath.

SANCTITY OF LAW

Now, before you go jumping all over the Pharisees, let's acknowledge that there is a certain logic in their position. God wants the sabbath day kept holy and Jesus had the other six days of the week in which to perform his healing. We need to preserve the sanctity of the law of life breaks down into anarchy — people doing whatever they want, when they want because it suits them.

What angers Jesus in this instance, is not that the Pharisees are being reasonable, but that they are being reasonable enough. Two thousand years later and we still tend to make the same mistake — concentrating on the rules, without considering the purpose behind all this.

Yes, God gave the people of Israel the sabbath. But the purpose was not to please or satisfy God, but to benefit his children: "The sabbath was made for man, not man for the withered hand. Jesus rebuked the Pharisees, saying: "Is it lawful on the sabbath to do good or to do harm, to save life or to kill?" (3:4).

SANCTITY OF LIFE

It is amazing to me that so many people still don't understand the reason for rules and regulations. They are made for our benefit — our highest benefit, that is — not to satisfy God. When God says "thou shalt not," his purpose is not to require our obedience, but to get us to behave in a way that is best for our own ultimate wellbeing — keeping in mind that our personal wellbeing is intricately interwoven with the wellbeing of everyone else. When he commands, "thou shalt not commit adultery," it is not because he simply has a rule against it, but he has a rule against it because adultery tends to break down the normal fiber of life and that ultimately affects everyone. When he tells us not to cover, it is not because our covetousness annoys him, but because we are the ones who are most injured by it. So, if it is bad for humanity, there is a commandment against it. If it is not harmful to us, then there is no legitimate commandment against it. The sanctity of law is important only when law preserves the sanctity of life.

I'm not saying that we always have to understand when God calls us to obey him, but usually, if we are wondering whether God commands it or not, we can determine the answer by asking: this thing we are to do or not to do, is it good for all of us, or not good?

To Jump-Start Your Alfalfa Production, Think Custom Farm Seed break-thru®.

break-thru® was introduced to the serious alfalfa producer 3 years ago as the first winter-hardy alfalfa variety combining rapid emergence, fast re-growth, high feed value and outstanding overall performance with exceptional resistance to major pests and diseases.

3-years later, there's still nothing better. Prove it, you say...

CFS break-thru placed first in "Average Alfalfa Yield In Tons Dry Matter Per Acre" at the Marshfield, WI 1991, 3-cut trial. 81 alfalfa varieties were entered.

In Michigan, break-thru took top place in the 1990 "Relative Feed Value Test" in the "Michigan Alfalfa Variety Testing Program," MSU, Lake City, MI.

And its area of adaptability extends through Pennsylvania and into New England.

PARS, Inc. markets Custom Farm Seed throughout the Eastern United States. In addition to break-thru alfalfa, count on PARS for a complete line of CFS seed, including hybrid seed corn, soybeans and waxy corn hybrids.

Soybean Growers, Feeders Will Meet

MILLERSTOWN (Perry Co.) — Soybean producers and those who feed soybeans to dairy livestock are invited to attend a soybean growers and feeders meeting sponsored by Cooperative Extension of Perry, Juniata, and Mifflin counties.

The program will include a farmer panel discussing their costs of production, growing, feeding, and marketing strategies. The program will also include discussion of soybean herbicides for specific rotations, the use of soybeans for a hedge against drought, and an economic outlook on future soybean prices, world and national stocks, and fall protein prices.

The meeting will be held at Benner's Restaurant, midway between Thompsettown and Millerstown along old Rt. 22. The meeting will begin at 9:45 a.m. and conclude promptly at 2 p.m.

Reservations for the meeting and the $7 family style meal of roast beef and turkey can be made by calling the Perry County extension office at (717)-582-2131, ext. 244.

Dr. Richard Adams, Penn State extension dairy nutritionist, will present a talk on feeding raw, roasted, and processed beans to dairy animals. Dr. Elwood Hatley, Penn State extension agronomy specialist, will be discussing planting and growing tips to assure maximum yields.

John Yocum, director of the Penn State Landisville Research

Farm in Lancaster County, will be discussing soybean herbicide programs. Dr. Greg Hanson, a midwestern farmer who recently joined the Penn State extension staff as an ag economist, will be discussing trends in soybean production and inventories, and what those trends indicate for future prices.

A farmer panel, made up of farmers from Perry, Juniata and Mifflin counties, will be discussing growing, feeding, and marketing soybeans. Ray Byler, Mifflin County, will be discussing his cost of production. Byler raises 500 acres of soybeans annually. George Schreiber, Perry County, will be discussing roasting home grown soybeans with a portable roasting service and feeding those beans to hogs and beef. Melvin Martin, a dairyman from Juniata County, will be discussing using his home grown beans in his dairy rations.

The meeting will qualify for category 01 pesticide license update credits. For more information on this meeting, call the cooperative extension office in your county.

To Jump-Start Feeding Efficiency, Think Custom Farm Seed Waxy Corn Hybrids.

It's no secret that digestible starch content in corn is the single ingredient that aids in the production of increased milk in dairy animals and faster weight gain in livestock. Experts say up to 25% more.

Regular dent corn is composed of a combination of 75% Amylopectin starch ... the more digestible starch ... and 25% Amylose starch ... the less digestible starch.

CFS waxy is 100% Amylopectin starch. That means 25% more digestible starch is available for your operation.

Think about this CFS waxy for 1992 ...

CFS W7551 (111-115 RM) ... Vigorous growth ... Excellent yield potential ... Good stalk quality ... Excellent drought tolerance.

PARS, Inc. markets Custom Farm Seed throughout the Eastern United States. In addition to waxy hybrid corn, count on PARS for a complete line of CFS seed, including break-thru® alfalfa, soybeans and hybrid seed corn.

Bedford Holds Extension Banquet

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent
EVERETT (Bedford Co.)—Terrell Jones, associate director of Campus Life at Penn State University, entertained and informed those attending the Bedford County extension banquet held at the Everett Church of the Brethren. Speaking on "Understanding Diversity — Celebrating and Understanding the Diversity of Human Life in America," Jones told the group to expect "tremendous changes in the next 10 to 15 years."

Mixing humor with facts, Jones said, "By the year 2000, seven out of every eight women will be on the work force. And 80 out of every 100 in the work force will be either women or a member of a minority race.

"The Hispanic population," he said, "is growing faster than any other group in America."

Bedford County Commissioner and long-time Morrison's Cove Farmer delivered a message about Farmland Preservation in Bedford County.

"All you need is 500 acres to form an ag security area," Rice said. "Once you have this security area, the township supervisors will not be able to make any law to limit farming in that area. Even the Right of Eminent Domain cannot take precedence over an ag security area."

He noted that South Woodbury

Township has 5,000 to 6,000 acres already in ag security.

Harold Ott, central regional director, said, "Bedford County is blessed to have a full extension staff. With all of the recent cut-backs, we only hope that can continue."

New directors elected included Nicole Childers, Guile Gal, and Terry Moxley. Officers include Dorothy Bromley, president; Paul Turner, vice president; Pam Hershberger, secretary; and Peggy McCammon, treasurer.

Dale Ivan, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, was a guest at the dinner and gave the opening remarks.

Fruit Growers Have Their Day

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — Penn State Extension plans a Commercial Fruit Growers Day from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 11, at the Century Plaza Motel in Washington, Pa.

This meeting features the latest information about managing modern intensive orchards according to well-known authorities from Penn State and Purdue universities.

Anyone seriously interested in fruit farming in this part of the country should plan on attending. Pest management will be discussed and pesticide license update credits given to those who attend. The registration fee of $15 covers the meeting and a buffet lunch. Please register ahead of time for this meeting.

Featured speakers include Dr. Richard Hayden, extension fruit specialist from Purdue University and William Kleiner, Penn State extension agent for fruit crops for Adams, Franklin, and York counties.

Hayden will discuss stone fruit production for this area and weed control in orchards. Kleiner will look at intensive orchard systems for Pennsylvania growers.

The latest Penn State recommendations for insect and disease control in orchards will also be discussed and numerous pesticide license update credits will be awarded for attending the seminar.

The Century Plaza Motel is located on U. S. Route 40 west, just off of Interstate 70 Exit 4 west of Washington.

For programs or more information, contact your local Penn State extension office in western Pennsylvania or Penn State Extension, Westmoreland County, P.O. Box 250, Greensburg, PA 15601, (412) 837-1402.

Management Information For Barn Use

State DHIA reports that the operating and capital budgets for the current 1992 year are conservative and reflect a strong concern by both the Board and management for the welfare of members, many of whom are experiencing cash problems caused by low milk prices.

The operating budget calls for no increases in staffing in 1992 and assumes an average enrollment of 335,000 cows each month. Current enrollment stands at about 339,000 cows, up from a low of 334,000 cows. Overall income is projected to be $4,659 million and expenses are expected to total $4,855 million yielding a negative margin of -$196,000. Cash reserves will be used to cover the shortfall.

Previously planned capital expenditures for '92 were eliminated in all possible areas resulting in a budget of $168,000 allocated as follows: $134,000 for installment payments for the new data processing system, $16,000 for a replacement sample pickup truck, $8,000 for new milk meters and a contingency of $10,000 for emergency needs.

If all goes as planned, no general across-the-board fee increases will be needed before October 1, 1992. However, the low level of cash reserves by then will almost certainly require a rate increase.

The report reminds all members that the association has developed a wide range of service options at different price levels over the last five years to help cope with cash flow problems at home. Members are encouraged to call the PA DHIA office at 800-344-8378 and talk with staff members about how money can be saved by enrolling on alternative testing programs.

Holly Milk Hosts School Economics Class

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

YORK SPRINGS (Adams Co.)—High school students in rural Adams County livened up a "dry" economics course by participating in the Junior Achievement's applied economics program with nearby Holly Milk. The idea was to present agricultural illustrations into economic class settings while the students learned the mechanics of business and marketing.

The students are seniors at Bermudian Springs High School. Holly Milk is the manufacturing plant of the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative that provided the educational and financial support. And Junior Achievement is a non-profit organization that promotes economic education with practical experience through a partnership between the business and educational communities.

"They not only taught us the process of business," said Ken Toner. "They taught us to be better people. Because they brought people in to show us about how to apply for a job, we learned what we should and should not do in an interview."

Tanya Petry said she learned things she did not know about business because the class sold bears to fellow students at Christmas.

"We learned how a corporation works," Petry said. "We sold stock and ran the corporation. That really helped me learn how to run a business."

Jason Forsythe was impressed with the examples of different salary and benefits packages. The students were given three different examples and asked to decide which package would be to their best advantage.

"We were divided into groups to discuss the packages," Forsythe said. "After we discussed it, in the end the package that had the least pay with the most benefits would be the best package to accept."

Jason Balek learned about how products are priced. "People think that products are outrageously priced," Balek said. "But we priced the bears just high enough to pay our expenses, commissions and pay back the stockholders. We found that the cost of production and marketing really determines the price."

Curt Chronister said he learned that the workers really determine the outcome of how the business runs. "They showed us what would happen if one person in the assembly line was not working up to his ability," Chronister said. "The line would slow down and things would be defective."

These students related to agriculture in different ways. Several thought farming would be a desirable occupation, others gave agriculture an average rating and several students rated agriculture's desirability as an occupation as low as a three in the scale of one to 10.

But they thought farmers were very important in the overall economy because they bought equipment and supplied food for consumers. The students were impressed with the sanitary conditions in the milk plant.

They said chemicals and fertilizers were necessary but also believed that farmers are concerned about the welfare of their animals and were concerned about the environment. They mentioned the contour strips in fields to hold soil erosion as an example.

Marsha Smith, financial controller, and William Schreiber, CEO of Holly, were the primary consultants. Their main task was to help students to understand the relevance and importance of the economic theories learned in class. In the process, students also acquired a better understanding of the importance of the agricultural industry.

The students made butter, created an assembly line for production, conducted a board meeting, and observed the operating decision and employment process. The concluding activity was a tour of Holly Milk's facility.

Cheryl Reinecker, class teacher, said the course includes characteristics of the American economic system and principles that influence business decisions and fosters appropriate economic decision-making skills. "The unselfish support of the personnel from Holly Milk is really appreciated,"

Reinecker said. "They have done much to help the 25 students in the course to better understand both the economic system and agriculture." And the students agree. "Will you put in the article that we want to thank Holly Milk for helping us want to come to class?" they asked. "And will you ask them to do it again next year?"

So there you are, students. Your requests are in the article. And the answers from Holly are: "You're welcome," and "Yes, we will do it again."

Ridge Addresses Wetland Reform

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, March 7, 1992-A21

WATERFORD — About 700 Pennsylvania landowners' Association, Inc. members and their guests attended the 5th annual membership meeting held in Waterford. The meeting on February 17, attracted members statewide including guests, several state and federal legislators.

Representative Tom Ridge explains the 1992 Wetland Reform and H.R. 1330 at the annual Pennsylvania Landowner's meeting.

The central theme focused on land use issues such as wetlands, endangered species and scenic river designations, all environmental policies seeking "preservation" of private land as opposed to "conservation" of natural resources. Guest speaker for the evening was Congressman Tom Ridge (R-21), co-sponsor of the Comprehensive Wetlands Conservation and Management Act, his presentation focused on the progress made to date surrounding the wetland controversy, but also stressed the critical importance of 1992. "Time is of the essence," Ridge stated, "this is the year to complete the task."

The Clean Water Act, which regulates wetlands, is up for reauthorization in Congress. Therefore, changes to wetland policy will occur this year and it is imperative that property owners' concerns are addressed. It is likely that what is not achieved in 1992 will have to wait another five years before the Act is again up for reauthorization.

Members were also updated on the Endangered Species Act, also up for reauthorization in 1992, as well as the current status of rivers targeted for inclusion in to the national Wild and Scenic Rivers bill. A new video presentation was also shown entitled "Wetlands: Our Environment, Whose Property?" (Part 2)... "A Call to Action." The film presented status updates on wetland victims depicted in the first film, as well as new wetland stories and important messages from Representative Jimmy Hayes (D-LA), sponsor of H.R. 1330 and Representative Tom Ridge (R-PA). Copies of the new video will be available for educational purposes sometime near mid March. Interested individuals may contact the PLA office for further information, or to order a videotape copy.

Grain Marketing Seminar

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Grain farmers who want to do a better job marketing their crops can get the direction they need at a meeting sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension.

A Grain Marketing Seminar will take place on Monday, March 30, at the Berks County Agricultural Center near Leesport, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Cost is $15 for the first attendee from a farm and $8 for others from that same farm.

Dr. James Russell, marketing specialist with Maryland Cooperative Extension, will explain more profitable ways to market corn, soybeans, and wheat.

The seminar will end before 3 p.m. with an outlook on the 1992 regional grain market.

As part of this seminar, each farm unit will get a complimentary copy of the comprehensive "Maryland Grain Marketing Notebook" (an $8 value). Attendees should arrive at 9 a.m. to register, view a satellite demonstration unit, and enjoy coffee and doughnuts.

Request a registration brochure from the Berks County Extension Office at (215) 378-1327 or other county cooperative extension offices in southeastern Pennsylvania.

If you have questions about the seminar, contact the organizer, Jeff Patton, extension marketing agent, at the Lehigh County Extension Office at (215) 391-9840. Reservations are requested by Thursday, March 26.

Castle, representing the northwest district. They replace Laszlo Moses and John Grice III, Washington, whose executive board terms expired.

Other members of the executive board include past president Wayne Harpster, Kenneth Mowry, Roaring Springs, Lloyd Pease, Susquehanna, Curtis Day, Shippenburg, and Donald Hostetter, Parkesburg.

Treasurer Dean Johnson reported an excess of income over expenses of $18,987 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1991, with a year-end member equity level of $456,017.

In his report to the membership, PHA executive director William Nichol shared a five-point "wish list" for the association. Nichol wishes that all 50 county clubs will become involved in the state's holiday cheese sale. Last year's participating 22 clubs raised a combined $24,000 for their treasuries.

Two of Nichol's wishes focused on the PHA's youth activities. One is that every county club will sponsor a junior organization, and the other wish is that more financial support can be raised for youth to participate in the state's annual junior convention.

With world trade a continuing issue for American agriculture, Nichol also wishes for a trade program which would provide transportation support for sending 30-40,000 Holstein bred heifers annually to needy countries around the world. In the 21 years in which PHA has been involved in the cattle export market, Holstein genetics have gone to some 50 countries worldwide.

Nichol's foremost wish focused on the regionalization of grass roots Holstein groups in areas of the country with more limited membership. While Pennsylvania has nearly 5,000 adult and 2,000 junior members, many areas have more limited resources of people and programs.

National Holstein Association director John Cope, Grantham, reported a dramatic upswing in numbers or registry applications submitted to the Brattleboro, Vermont, headquarters. Applications received during the first seven weeks of 1992 tallied some 10,000 more than in the comparable period of 1991. Transfer applications were 5,000 greater in that same period. That increase in applications has resulted in a 19-day backlog of work.

Cope, the NHA board's finance chairman, also reported that, because of the association's decision to not raise fees during last year's dairy industry cash-flow crunch, over $1 million was used from the reserve fund. However, operations management still allowed for the adding of $700,000 to NHA's reserve fund principal of $14 million.

National director Tom Kelly, Tyrone, urged every member to attend one of the upcoming Holstein Winter Forum programs. Numerous policies and programs of HFA are up for review and consideration, including the long-range strategic plan, classification, national shows, merchandising policies and genetic issues.

Members voted to support David Burket, East Freedom, in his bid for the national board seat being vacated by Pennsylvania director John Cope. After eight years on the board, Cope will retire as a director during the National Holstein convention, to be held in late June in Salt Lake City, Utah.

By unanimous vote, the membership also passed a pair of resolutions dealing with environmental issues. On resolution supports legislation that would establish an agriculture advisory board for the state's Department of Environmental Resources. Such a board would assist and advise on policy development dealing with normal farming practices.

A second resolution supports coordination among all state agencies dealing with soil conservation plans and pesticide and wetlands issues.

Planners for the February 1993 annual convention announced the host site to be Wilkes-Barre, Luzerne County.

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent
WARRENDALE (Allegheny Co.) — At least one person sent a letter to President Bush after his recent trade visit to Japan, suggesting that he take dairy producers on such missions if he wants to promote American products.

No answer to that suggestion has yet been received, according to letter writer Steve Kerr, chief executive officer of the National Holstein Association. Kerr related that correspondence during his featured talk with members and guests at the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

Kerr, the Holstein CEO since last August, is visiting members and associations around the country gathering input to help chart future policy and programs of the breed organization.

As part of the grass-roots-input program, Kerr announced the planned installments of an 800-toll-free telephone line at the Brattleboro, Vermont, headquarters for use by members needing assistance. A second additional 800-line will speed help for solving logistical problems encountered by classifiers and consultants working in the field.

Because only four of the past 10 fiscal years have been financially profitable for the national association, three of the four area offices are scheduled for closing, including the Harrisburg location. That move is projected to save some $200,000 annually.

"HFA continues to wrestle with problems similar to those farmers face," noted Kerr. Among them are continuing fewer, but larger farms, changing technology, uncertainties of world trade and milk pricing.

Kerr urged members to participate in upcoming Winter Forum meetings, where policy issues are debated at the grass roots level. One issue in line for intense scrutiny tiny is seeking ways of marketing the majority of registered Holsteins without index "numbers." An ad hoc committee is being appointed to study that marketing challenge.

A worldwide demand for milk will grow, Kerr believes, and the United States may be the most significant exporter of dairy products in the next decade. He predicts that heavy levels of European dairy subsidies "cannot continue forever," and that the efficiency of the American dairy producer will make the industry very competitive on world markets.

Pennsylvania is expected to continue as a leading dairy state, possibly moving into the third high state nationwide, according to Cornell economists cited by Kerr. Environmental problems encountered in expanding dairy production areas, like California, and continuing heavy urban population in the Northeast requiring dairy product favors the Commonwealth's continuance as a milk-producing center.

With a background in dairy cooperative and legislative work, Kerr expressed extreme frustration with the inability of the dairy industry to overcome the price-breaking resulting from even just a small surplus of milk production. The government's commitment to a cheap food supply enhances milk pricing problems.

"Co-ops can manage the nation's milk supply," Kerr said, if all farmers participated in cooperative marketing. "That's what's standing in the way of better prices."

Kerr warned Pennsylvania Holstein breeders that dairy is "on the list" for animal rightists' activities, and the HFA is working toward a practices plan and policy on animal care.

"We are so well fed that we have the luxury of thinking that food grows in grocery stores," Kerr lamented in his closing remarks.

Backus Highlights Holstein History

JOYCE BUPP

WARRENDALE (Allegheny Co.) — Drawing from a wealth of experience, an abundant reserve of memories and his good-natured sense of humor, featured speaker Horace Backus delighted attendees of the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

Backus, who with his brother Charles arranged and conducted hundreds of cattle sales over the past 40 years, traced highlights of his Pennsylvania memories for convention goers. The Backus brothers continue the Backus Pedigree Company begun in 1912 by their father in Mexico, New York.

On the evening before his talk, Horace returned to the familiar spot in the auction box at the 1992 convention sale, which opened the PHA annual confab, held February 26-29 at the Sheraton Inn.

The first sale the Backus firm held in Pennsylvania was in 1953, with an average of $649, second-high in the state for that year. Backus recalled their initial concerns over whether "anyone would come" to this, their first, sale in the state.

A backbone event of the Backus sales activities in Pennsylvania were the Garden Spot sales. In the early years, Backus noted that "Pennsylvania was a buying state," and cattle frequently had to be brought in from Canada to assemble enough animals to hold a sale. Cattle were sometimes simply tied to fence and tents set up in available parking lots.

"After the sales, there was nothing left but dust," chuckled Backus in remembrance. He noted that in the ensuing years, many of the "alumni" of those sales have gone on to be outstanding dairy farmers and cattle breeders.

Learning when to set sales, according to Backus, was sometimes a painful - and costly - experience.

All-Pennsylvania Awards

All-Pennsylvania awards are presented annually to the top animals in eighteen classes of the three major shows sponsored by PHA. Points toward the award can be earned at the Spring Show, any one of the five regional Championship shows, and the Fall Championship show.

A combined total of more than 1,000 head were shown at the state's major Holstein shows, with a total of 54 head winning awards at All-Pennsylvania, Reserve All-Pennsylvania and Honorable Mention levels.

Largest single winner of All-Pennsylvania recognition was the James and Nina Burdette family, Mercersburg, garnered nine awards. Steve and Chris Wood,

Pennsylvania Holstein

Has $12,300 Sale Topper

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent
Warrendale (Allegheny County) — A colorful setting of gold and black balloons and gold-sweatshirt-clad sale crew brightened both the spirits and the bidding from a standing-room-only crowd at the annual Pennsylvania Holstein Association convention sale.

Top seller from the sale ring set up in the spacious ballroom of the Sheraton Inn was Willowcrag Mocal May, a recently-freshened heifer that commanded the final bid of $12,300 from buyers G.W. and Shari Snider, Goshen, Indiana. Consignor of the sale topper was Jim Miller of Columbiana, Ohio.

Sired by Eric-Dew Quietcove Micheal, the two-year-old is from a Walkway Chief Mark dam scored EX-90 as a three-year-old. The dam's three-year milk record topped 26,000 with 1080 pounds of fat. Second dam was a VG-86 Gold Medal Dam Valiant and third dam was a VG-88 Gold Medal Dam.

Second high seller was an October heifer sired by Southwind Bell of Barlee, fetching a winning $8200 bid from William Pettit, Vincentown, New Jersey.

Singing-Brook M Win Nadine-ET is from four generations of maternal excellents, sired by breed greats including Board Chairman and Valiant. She was consigned by the Obie Snider family's Singing Brook Farm, Imbler.

Maplebound Tradition Cookie was third high on the sales list with a final bid of $7200 from William Conyngham, Shavertown.

The VG-88 three-year-old is sired by Bis-May Tradition Cleitus and a granddaughter of the well-known Swampy-Hollow Sugar-Twin, 3E-91. She milked 19,310 milk in her first lactation, with a 4.0 protein and 4.8 fat test. Interest for a possible bull-calf contract was indicated. Consignors were Timothy and Teresa Kissling, Robesonia.

Bidding continued spirited through the sale of the 60 head, tallying a sale average of $3364.

The Barlows are members of the Chester County Holstein Club. Tim has served on the Board of Directors and as the County Sales Representative. He also serves on the Chester County DHIA Board of Directors and is Secretary to that Board. They are also members of the Chesco Cooperative.

They list as some of their goals to improve their herd average to the 25,000 milk range, and their BAA to 105 as well as increasing their pounds of milk produced per man and decreasing the feed costs by improving their forage quality. They would also like to invest in two or three top cow families and do some embryo transfer work on them.

Tim and Phyllis have three young children who they hope will be interested in the Dairy industry in the future.

The Barlows, as Pennsylvania's winners will have their application submitted to the National Holstein Association for consideration in the National Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Contest.

Is Alternative Ag A Viable Option?

DOVER, Del. — An exploration of the alternative and sustainable agriculture movements were one of the topics addressed at Ag Forum '92: Opportunities and Challenges recently at Delaware Technical and Community College in Georgetown.

Alternative and sustainable agriculture have been buzz words in the agricultural community for several years now, but they mean different things to different people. Alternative agriculture is generally thought to mean introducing non-traditional crops into an area or finding creative new ways to market an old product.

Sustainable agriculture is slightly different. It generally means adopting production techniques that will sustain a profitable business but also put less stress on the environment.

Ferdinand Wirth, marketing manager for the department of agriculture, led a discussion about efforts to develop alternative agriculture in Delaware. His talk focused on the development of new crops in the area such as sorghum and wine grapes.

Dr. Edward R. Jones, a professor in the department of agriculture and natural resources at Delaware

State College, discussed the concept of sustainable agriculture — how successful that movement has been and where it may be headed. In addition, three recipients of the department of agriculture's alternative agriculture/marketing research grants discussed the problems and successes they had getting their projects off the ground.

Other seminar topics included trucking laws and safety, environmental regulation as it affects agriculture, and aquaculture opportunities.

Pennsylvania's first consignment sale to raise funds for hosting a national convention was held in 1954; the sales date was set for Good Friday.

"How ignorant we were to set that day," Backus related. "Never again."

A similar less-than-favorable buyer turnout occurred the year a sale was set for the opening day of deer hunting season—a date picked by non-hunters.

"Talk about being lonely," Backus wryly remembered.

The sales and pedigree specialist praised Pennsylvania Holstein's Bill Nichol for the foresight to start the spring calf sales.

Though sales offering as many of 150 head of calves and heifers were almost unprecedented, they drew in buyers from across the country, especially California.

One of those was Amelio Curti, who Backus cited as a forerunner and trend setter in buying cattle using the sire Predicted Difference as a gauge of pedigree value.

Fighting the scourge of Bangs disease over the years was a battle Backus remembers well. He cited one sale in which a heifer sold for $1400, was then announced as not having been vaccinated, and then resold for $700.

Scattered through Backus memories of cattle through their sales arenas are names that live on in the famed pedigrees of the Holstein breed: Lucifer, Ivanhoe, Whirlhill Kingpin. Even now, he noted, five of the top seven Holstein bulls have their roots in Pennsylvania.

"The breed has always belonged to everyone," Backus observed, relating how the bulk of notable contributions and outstanding cow families have originated in farmer-breeder herds. "Anyone can breed the greatest daughter of the greatest sire."

With less than half the cows of a half-century ago in this country, and two-and-one-half times as many registered ones, Backus proclaimed that the Golden Age of registered Holsteins is not some fading part of history, but today.

Pennsylvania Holstein Convention News

Holstein Hall Of Fame Winners Named

WARRENDALE (Allegheny Co.)—Two well-known Holstein breeders were named to the Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame last week at the state convention. They are Paul King, formerly of York Co., and Gordon Wood, in Tioga County.

King was born and raised on a family farm in Damascus, Md. Paul, along with his wife Kathy and their three children, owned and operated Kingway Holsteins in Delta. The King family was noted in the show ring as they won numerous times at the local and state levels.

Paul is a strong believer in breeding cows for production, type and longevity. He bred five Gold Medal Dams, owned and developed the first 4E Dam-Daughter pair, was a Progressive Breeder Registry Award winner for eight years and he bred the popular Kingway Elevation Very bull that added so much to the breed both here and in the European countries.

Paul developed a herd with many offspring merchandised locally, through state consignment sales and internationally. Paul and Kathy sold their herd privately in 1988, the herd average at that time was 22,583m 850f on a BAA of 107.8.

Paul has been active in the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, serving as York County State Director for nine years, on the State Executive Committee for three years and a York County officer for many years. He also served on the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative Board of Directors for six years and has served as a delegate to the National Holstein convention for 10 years.

Paul and Kathy served as 4-H Leaders and Dairy Judging coaches for 25 years. They are presently active as volunteers with New Tribes, a missionary service program.

Paul is also a noted Holstein judge having worked numerous state shows, serving as judge of the Eastern National Holstein Show in 1991 and he also judged shows in Columbia and Peru.

Wood is the owner/operator of Gor-Wood D Holstein Farms in Mansfield. He started farming in 1947 milking grade Holsteins. He began adding registered cattle in the early 1970's and they have built the herd to its present level of 150 cows averaging 22,365m 7585f 726p with a BAA of 109.8. There are 60 excellent cows in the herd with over 50 of them carrying the Gor-Wood D prefix.

Gordon served eight years on the State Holstein Board of Directors and three years on the Executive Committee. He has also been a Delegate to the National Holstein Convention on numerous occasions.

Wood has shown cattle for many years, winning the Premier Breeder of Pennsylvania Fall Championship Show for the past six years as well as Premier Exhibitor three of the last four years.

Gordon has served in other leadership capacities including 15 years on the NEDCO Milk Cooperative Board of Directors, 20 years as Director of Headquarters Production Credit, 15 years on the local ASCS Committee and 7 years on the School Board including serving as President.

For the past 30 years Gordon and his family have operated Wood's Auction Service specializing in cattle and machinery sales.

Gordon and his wife Dorothy of 42 years have four sons, Robert, Ronald, Tim and Ted.

Pennsylvania Fourth In Milk Production

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff said Friday that despite last year's devastating drought and sluggish economy, Pennsylvania dairy farmers' 1991 milk production of 10.1 billion pounds — a 2 percent increase over 1990 — was enough to push the state up from fifth to fourth place nationally.

"Challenges and accomplishments often go together in Pennsylvania and even when the going became tough, our producers set new records," Wolff told the state Senate Appropriations Committee.

Pennsylvania surpassed Minnesota to achieve the fourth place milk production ranking. The top three milk-producing states are Wisconsin, California and New York.

Wolff also reported on a number of state Agriculture Department accomplishments in the area of agricultural economic development, farmland preservation, exports and food safety.

"Agricultural economic development has been given a high priority," Wolff said, noting that since 1987, nearly $100 million in funding has gone into agricultural processing and hardwoods development.

For example, the PennAg program that provides loans to agricultural processors with fewer than 100 employees, has loaned nearly $3 million since its inception in 1989, and will make another $1 million available in the current fiscal year.

"Last year, when I came before this committee, I told you our farmland preservation effort was moving in high gear," Wolff said. "This year, we are indeed in high gear."

The secretary said that to date, 26 counties have started farmland preservation programs and six others have formed exploratory boards. So far, 128 farms and a total of 14,519 acres have been protected under the program.

Wolff said that Pennsylvania's agricultural export program "continues to be a success story for Pennsylvania agriculture," increasing $126 million, or 84 percent, since 1986.

Pennsylvania's agricultural exports were enhanced through increased participation in trade shows, where representatives helped foreign buyers discover quality Pennsylvania products.

The agriculture secretary also called for the passage of a new comprehensive food law — covering packaging, sanitation, food safety and standards — that would replace 17 existing state laws.

Wolff said passage of the law, which would be similar to those adopted by 43 other states, would provide Pennsylvania's food industry with uniformity with other state and federal laws.

Progressive Breeder Registry awards for three years and over went to, from left, front, Keith Decker, Jay Houser, and Calvin Will. Back, Clarence Stauffer, Holstein consultant, Brian Kelly and John Howard.

Governors Visit Garber

"Some of the most effective methods are the least costly. The small basin below the farmstead that collects run-off is a good example of a low-tech, low-cost solution that can be used on farms all across Pennsylvania.

"One of the things to be learned on this farm is that nutrient management saves money for the farmer in reducing expensive inputs."

Scheafer said the work between Pennsylvania and Maryland on the Chesapeake Bay program is regionalism at its very best, working together to solve problems.

"Garber's grandfather was undoubtedly ahead of his time when he installed terraces on the farm to reduce water run-off," Scheafer said. "The Garber family continues to follow that practice. The stream that flows in the meadow beside the farm buildings that has been cleaned up by proper management practices, flows into a river that flows into the Susquehanna and on to the Bay. Therefore, you are directly responsible for cleaning the bay. You have done it, and we appreciate what you have done."

The entourage of governors and other important people met first at the Farm and Home Center for a press conference. Then, Bob Gregory, Lancaster's conservation district manager, and Gerald Heistand, assistant conservation district manager, escorted the tour to the farm.

Dauphin Sets Awards Banquet

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — The Dauphin County Conservation District will hold its annual awards banquet on Tuesday, March 10, at 6:30 p.m. at the Agriculture and Natural Resources Center in Dauphin.

The public is invited to attend and hear quest speaker Dr. Noel Falk, better known as "The Plant Doctor," deliver a talk on conservation.

A segment of the banquet program will be devoted to honoring individuals whose efforts to conserve the county's natural resources have been exemplary. Among those will be the 1991 Farm Cooperator, the Environmental Education Teacher and Conservation Organization of the Year, and an award for conservation awareness in municipal government.

This year the Dauphin Conservation District commemorates its fortieth anniversary.

Tickets for the banquet and program are $9 and may be purchased from the conservation district office at 1451 Peters Mountain Road, Dauphin, PA 17018 or by calling (717) 921-8100.

Beef Breeders Carefully Consider EPDs, Calving Ease In Dams

First in a series

Editor's note: Several commercial beef cow/calf operations are recognizing the benefits of using bulls in their breeding programs. In the first of a three-part series, several commercial beef farms share their views of what it takes to run a successful sire herd and how to manage the operation for increased profitability.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
DAYTON (Armstrong Co.) — There are rules of thumb for nearly any farm. But the two rules of thumb for selecting herd sires for your commercial cow/calf beef operation are simple:

• Rule One: carefully consider expected progeny differences (EPDs) in bull selection along with visual assessment.

• Rule Two: The mother's milking ability is crucial at calving time.

And while few commercial operations use artificial insemination (AI) in the brood cows, the benefits of using bulls outweigh many of the difficulties in trying to manage an AI program.

Those are the conclusions reached in the experiences of three Pennsylvania herds, one here in Armstrong County and the others in Franklin and Westmoreland counties. And those who purchase bulls may want to take those factors into consideration in light of the upcoming Performance-Tested Bull Sale at the Penn State Ag Arena, University Park, at noon on Friday, March 27 during the Beef Expo.

Angus herd

Jim and Marcia Larson of Singing Meadow Farms in Dayton, Armstrong County (with full-time help from manager Joe Saxfield) maintain a 300-head cow purebred Angus herd on about 1,400 acres and raise about 300 calves a year. In addition, they manage 100 head of sheep and six head of quarter-horses to work the cattle.

For the Larsons, it is simply much easier and less expensive for the bulls to do all the work (bulls provide better than 70 percent coverage over AI breeding). In the spring, the cows are divided up into lots and are serviced by about 10 bulls. Altogether, the farm raises about 50 replacement calves per year.

For the Wingert Farm in St. Thomas, Franklin County, using bulls was also a matter of how much of a work force was available to ensure insemination. The farm opted for using bulls simply because during breed season there was "no time to devote to cows," said Eugene Wingert.

The Wingert farm (which also raises about 2,000 hogs out of a 200-sow farrow-to-finish system) raises a total of about 160 cows and uses a pasture rotation system. The system uses about 40 cows in one area, rotated on a regular schedule. Many of the acres on the farm (800 acres, mostly tillable) are used to raise corn and other feed for the beef and hog operation.

Lancaster County Announces Scholarships

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — One of the objectives of the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation is to encourage the higher education of the youth of Lancaster County. In this respect, the Foundation is announcing the offering of scholarship awards in 1992 in the fields of agriculture and home economics.

Each scholarship award will be in the amount of $1,000 and may be used to help defray tuition, fees, or room and board expenses at any accredited educational institution, which offers a course of study in agriculture or home economics.

The Farm and Home Foundation Scholarships are made available through the earnings of an Irrevocable Trust Fund set up by the late Elmer L. Esben-shade, one of the founders of the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation. The income from this trust fund will be offered annually in the form of educational scholarships through the Farm and Home Foundation.

Scholarship applications are available from senior guidance counselors and vocational agriculture and home economics teachers in all school districts in Lancaster County.

Interested youth are urged to contact either their senior guidance counselor, vocational agriculture, or home economics teacher for details and an application blank. Additional information is also available from John H. Schwartz, chairman of the Scholarship Committee, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, PA 17601, (717) 394-6851. Application forms must be forwarded by April 15, 1992.

This Spring, Watch India To See If We'll Have A Drought

southern hemisphere phenomenon caused by the warming of the surface of the Pacific Ocean along the equator. Thompson described his own research and findings of colleagues at a research site in Bangalore, India.

In a paper, "Impact of Global Warming and Cooling on Mid-western Agriculture," published in the "Journal of Iowa Academic Science" in 1990, Thompson spoke of the El Nino (Spanish for "the boy") as "a flip-flop of the pressure patterns on either side of the southern Pacific Ocean (Tahiti and Darwin, Australia)."

During the southern hemisphere's normal summer — our winter — the pattern of La Nina (Spanish for "little girl") dominates, with high pressure over western South America, and low pressure over Australia. However, during the period of El Nino, the patterns flip-flop, creating a situation of cool, rainy weather and low pressure patterns for the western part of South America, particularly Peru, and droughty weather in Australia and Indonesia, according to Thompson.

Jet stream

In addition, the subtropical jet stream continues to migrate northward, according to Thompson, spilling rainy, cool weather into Mexico and Texas, as has happened this winter.

Reports on the El Nino cycle date back to 1551, when church records indicated the pattern which caused a poor fish catch in Peru. Since 1973, the effects of the El Nino have been scrutinized, because "the people in Peru have been concerned about the El Nino" cycles.

The current El Nino began in October of 1991 and continues. If it continues through the growing season, Thompson said, "we'll begin to get more rain in the eastern part of the U.S. as that subtropical jet migrates further north."

Conditions appear dry and warm in India right now, and if that pattern holds up, rain could arrive in the eastern U.S. during the corn season.

El Nino before drought

"We have never had a severe drought while India is having a severe drought," he said. In most years, the El Nino occurs before the drought. "The important thing is, our droughts have occurred between El Nino events."

Thompson said if the El Nino lasts through the summer, "then I'd say the chances are very high of drought in 1993," he said. Of the 26 El Nino events since 1897, 12 major droughts have occurred, but only if the El Nino occurs in a drought cycle — as is happening now, according to Thompson.

But he said if the El Nino fades in the spring, we could experience a drought in later part of the summer, as happened in 1983. According to his records, El Ninos have occurred in 1891, 1899, 1905, 1911, 1920, 1951, 1965, 1972, 1979, and 1987 — many predating a severe drought.

Deficit state

Pennsylvania continues to operate as a "deficit state," consuming more grain than it can produce, said John Sutton, Lovatt and Company, Ambler, in his speech, "Pennsylvania Grain Markets — Unlimited Possibilities."

Sutton said that Pennsylvania

"If India is having a drought in May and June of this year, I can bet you that we'll have a more nearly normal growing season in the corn belt," said Dr. Louis M. Thompson, emeritus associate dean of agriculture at Iowa State University, at the Pennsylvania Corn Conference.

Pennsylvania continues to operate as a "deficit state," consuming more grain than it can produce, said John Sutton, Lovatt and Company, Ambler.

continues to import corn from other states, including North Carolina and Canada. However, for Pennsylvania producers, there are still many opportunities for all sorts of corn products, he said.

The biggest production is Number 2 yellow corn. But producers have to put as much emphasis on marketing the crop as on producing it.

Producers should especially consider making the corn the best quality, because poor quality loads will get turned down by those who buy it.

Markets react

Sutton said that the markets react quickly to news — more quickly than before most people see it. "And when everybody says the market is going up, it probably is going down," he said.

But the importance is to get the best net return for the cash crop, which comes from a high basis and high Chicago board of trade price. (Basis is the difference between the Chicago board of trade price and the local cash price, which fluctuates every year.)

"We're blessed with mostly a positive basis in Pennsylvania," he said.

Dry weather

Sutton said this prices this year are extremely difficult to predict because of the "greater than normal possibility of dry weather," he said.

Also, the recession and the election year combine to create problems in predicting corn prices.

This year, according to figures obtained from USDA and other sources, Sutton said that if we plant 79 million acres, we should harvest about 71 million acres at a normal yield of 116 bushels per acre. Total crop should be about 8.236 billion bushels with a usage factor of 8.150 billion bushels.

The SPARKS forecast calls for about 78.9 million acres in 1992. Under suitable growing conditions and assuming no major upheavals, according to Sutton, prices for corn should range from $2.55-$2.80 per bushel (Chicago price). If we have low stocks and dry weather, the corn price could reach as high as $3.50 or more per bushel.

High yield panel

Also at the conference, a high yield strategy panel (moderated by Lynn Hoffman, Penn State agronomist) focused on the grower experiences of three farmers — James Justice Jr., West Virginia;

Daryl Alger, a Lebanon County corn grower; and John McDowell, a Mercer County corn grower.

McDowell grows about 900 acres of corn and manages about 500 head of cattle. He explained that his operation uses a great deal of manure to build up the soil organic profile and he chisel plows to keep the ground loose. He also carefully watches soil pH levels and plants 300 acres of corn, 150 acres of beans, 70 acres of wheat, 50 acres of oats, and 200 acres of hay.

Alger is part of a four-member operation that maintains about 4,000 acres. On his own farm, Alger maintains about 180 acres and oversees two farms, including a dairy and beef cattle business. He uses mostly commercial fertilizer on his corn and does little if any tillage at planting time (compaction is a real concern, and the planter is "the first thing to go over the ground in the spring," he said). He emphasized the use of a starter fertilizer high in phosphorus.

Justice, who placed high in many corn growers award contests, manages about 24,000 acres with farms in North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia, and Virginia. He said he believes in early planting and the importance of knowing the seed, seed company, and the land and what works best with it. Justice said the marketing strategy should evolve into a production strategy and emphasized the importance of using a strong placement of phosphorus and the right seed numbers for the best yield.

All the growers emphasized the need for selecting the right hybrid and continuing to test different hybrids to select the numbers that work for the farm.

PFA Head: Government Regs Erode Value Of Property Rights

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The head of a statewide farm organization called on Congress to enact legislation to protect property rights, reduce capital gains taxes and reform the Legal Services Corporation.

Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA), urged action during a breakfast meeting attended by Pennsylvania's Congressional delegation and about 200 farmers participating in PFA's two-way Washington Legislative Tour. The day before, the farmers had visited their congressmen for face-to-face discussions of agricultural issues.

Eckel told the lawmakers that government regulations are eroding the value of property rights. "At present it's the wetlands regulations getting the spotlight," Eckel said, "but we could point to environmental restrictions, denial of water rights, mineral rights and other economic uses of property, conservation, easements and the outright taking of property without compensation."

Eckel called for just compensation for property rights as guaranteed by the "takings" protection of the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution.

"If the value of private property is diminished by public regulation, doesn't it make sense for the public to compensate the property owner?" Eckel said. "How can we limit or eliminate the use of private property through a public edict and expect the landowner to suffer the economic setback? If the government can't afford such action, certainly we can't ask a single citizen to carry the financial burden of the general public."

Stating that all constitutional rights are precious, Eckel said, "If we condone the loss of the rights to private ownership of property, and just compensation, what are the next Bill of Rights guarantees we are willing to sacrifice... freedom of speech?... freedom of religion?"

Turning to the issue of capital gains, Eckel said, "Lowering capital gains taxes will help all Americans, regardless of income levels."

PFA favors adjusting capital gains for inflation and reducing the capital gains tax rate from 28 percent to 15 percent.

"We talk about getting the economy moving while at the same time we tax capital when it moves from a declining enterprise to another which holds economic promise for future years," Eckel said. "Enactment of a lower capital gains tax makes good economic sense and it's fair to all concerned."

Eckel also pointed out that PFA has been urging reform of the Legal Services Corporation (LSC) for years because it has gone far beyond its purpose of providing legal aid to the poor. Started in 1974, Legal Services today coordinates what is in effect the largest law firm in the U.S. — 6,000 attorneys and 4,000 support staff. It spends more than $323 million in taxpayers money and $150 million in private funds.

"Farmers seem to be a prime target of the LSC-funded migrant advocate attorneys who sue ag employers on behalf of migrant and seasonal farmworkers claiming violations of worker protection and wage laws," Eckel said. "Farm families must either expend vast financial resources defending their innocence in federal court, or settle out of court. In the latter case, evidence against the farm family in many cases is nonexistent, but they choose to settle because they can't afford the cost of protracted legal procedures."

PFA is urging passage of legislation which would prohibit LSC-funded attorneys from soliciting clients or recovering fees from private defendants and would also require positive identification of clients by name. The legislation would also prohibit LSC-funded attorneys from engaging in lobbying activities or using private funding for purposes prohibited under the LSC statute.

"The reforms are urgently needed to bring sanity into Legal Services' spending, and its activities into line with what Congress intended," Eckel told the legislators.

thinking. The values we hold dear as Christians are being undermined and our children are the guinea pigs for a "New World Order." Do let your voice be heard and let the State Board of Education know that our children need to learn things that will help them to grow up to be productive members of our society, that will prepare them to find work and raise healthy productive children of their own someday. Our children don't need "cotton candy" educations but something they can really sink their teeth into. We need to get back to the basics of education, the three "R's" and the building up of the traditional values that have made our nation great.

Record-keeping

For the farm operated by Mike and Naomi Costello in Pleasant Unity, Westmoreland County, it is a matter of record-keeping — because the bulls have been carefully selected, the selection of herd sires and maintaining careful records on cow fertility goes right along with using bulls. The Costellos are simply more familiar with using maternal breeding techniques and have found them to be dependable, reliable, less costly, and less labor-intensive than using AI.

What does this mean for the industry? For one thing, it means those who raise bulls must pay more attention to their fertility — and that means taking a closer look at their mothers.

"It's hard to put my thumb on what characteristics are more important than any others," said Jim Larson. According to Larson, the two most important traits when selecting herd sires include rate of gain and calving ease.

The cow's milking ability comes into play too, according to Larson. "Because of the milk they provide to the calves, sometimes the high-milking mothers don't look so great, but their heifer calves are kept for the milking ability for the herd," he said.

Raise 80 cows

The Costellos raise about 80 cows using three bulls on their 236 acre (180 pasture acres) farm. They obtained all their heifers from fall-graded feeder cattle sales in Virginia.

Calving ease was of top concern, according to Costello. The first three bulls for the herd sires came from Wehrmann Farms, in New Market, Va., and milking ability was also an important consideration. Many of the heifers obtained were L-1 (large-framed and with #1 muscling). Two are Rito bulls and one is a Traveler bull.

The Costellos are also using Gelbvieh bulls, obtained from Knoll Crest Farms in Red House, Va., which provide less waste than the Angus, more lean type confirmation, more muscling, better milking ability, good growth, and good hybrid vigor when crossing.

"People aren't familiar with the Gelbvieh cattle around here," said Costello. The progeny has included only nine calves. So far, however, according to Costello, they've "all done really well. They have a really nice temperament."

Four bulls

Altogether, the Wingerts keep four bulls — an Angus, a Salers, an Angus/Chianina cross, and a Simmental.

Most of the farms agree that it would be hard to pinpoint exactly what the "best" crossbreed combination would be. Most, however, are satisfied with the breeds they chose to work with.

"We're always looking for something new that would work for our operation," said Wingert. The important thing for Wingert is to keep looking around and working to find the best combination that will improve the herd.

"We depend a lot on EPDs," said Jim Larson. But to his farm, it's just as important to consider the visual appraisal of the bull as well as the EPDs. Together, those two factors work to provide the best measurement of what bulls will do well in the herd.

Records for herd

Surprisingly, the three farms did not take time to record exactly what it cost per year to maintain the cows. But records for the whole herd are maintained on each of the farms — the Costellos keep extensive records on all cows and bulls, especially dates of birth, birth weights, any illness or calving problems, in addition to gain per day and a ratio comparing each calf to all other calves in the herd. They also keep health records, including the dates treated, weights, and "anything that will prove useful to maintaining the herd," said Costello.

Farm records kept by the Wingerts include the dam, mother, calf number, rate of gain indications, and other factors, according to Eugene Wingert. Another big concern, according to Wingert, is the milking ability of the dam.

Herd records kept by the Larsons include the history on every cow — calving records, rate-of-gain, quality of calves, and any other information important to herd management.

For the Larsons, good calves come from the top of the herd — the records make this "pretty obvious," said Jim.

Ideal weight

The ideal weight for the cow at breeding is around 1,100 pounds, according to Larson. A 550-600 pound calf out of a medium-sized cow is expected, "for as many years as they can keep having calves." One of the cows in the Larson herd is 16 years old.

But looking at the size of the cow and determining what kind of calf she will have will prove fruitless sometimes, according to the farms. In the Costello's case, one cow "looked so thin" at 900 pounds, but "she had a great calf every year," said Costello. Another cow, weighing about 1,300 pounds, "also had a great calf."

The farms usually go to the local sales and some travel to different parts of the state to sell their calves. The Costellos rely on sales at the Westmoreland County Sale. They are considering using the Tel-O-Auction, a method of marketing feeder cattle.

The Larsons and Wingerts sold several of their calves to local 4-H and FFA clubs, which have garnered several show champions.

Finish cattle

The Wingerts finish and sell their cattle to Greencastle Livestock Auction and local butchers. In the past, many were sold at the Lancaster Stockyards.

The Larsons sell their calves to the McCoy Cattle Company at the Lancaster Stockyards.

The Larsons rely on fall vaccination, including deworming, with the aid and advice of a veterinarian if need be. The Costellos rely on the advice of Dr. Ron Staas, Latrobe, to help with the program, though most of the farms still do much of the health care by themselves.

To ensure increasing farm productivity, the Wingerts have relied on a diet for the brood cows of a small amount of silage, mostly hay and pasture. "We calve starting March 1," said Wingert. "Right now we're giving the cows all the good quality alfalfa they can eat. This increases the flow of milk as well as conditions the cow for rebreeding."

During the calving season, the cows are checked every 4-6 hours to make sure they are calving smoothly and to ensure that the calves are healthy.

Carefully manage program

The Larsons keep the cattle in 800 acres of pasture that is intensively grazed and carefully manage the feeding program.

For all the farms, learning about how to improve the herd is a combination of following the individual herd and, whenever possible, seeking help from the local extension offices and Penn State.

The Larsons, like many commercial beef farms, rely on many of the symposiums and conferences that provide information geared to the needs of commercial producers. In addition, many of the local and national cattle associations offer information for members on herd improvement.

For the Wingerts, in the past, the Performance-Tested Bull Sale has provided them with bulls that were essential to their herd. This year, they will also attend the sale to see what may be available for their herd.

Editor's note: The next article in the series will involve trait selection and EPD consideration when selecting a herd bull.

National Dairy Board Reviews Research Spending

ARLINGTON, VA. — Dairy farmers checkoff dollars are used for lots of activities, all aimed at increasing the bottom line of income statements at the farm level. "After advertising, product and nutrition research sees the largest chunk of the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board's promotion dollars at $10.9 million or 14.6 percent of the program budget," explains Harold Reiff, Indiana dairy farmer and chairman of the National Dairy Board's dairy foods and nutrition research committee.

Research falls into two categories: dairy foods which looks for new products, packages or technologies to make better products and nutrition which explores the nutrient content of dairy foods and the effects of their consumption on human health. Dairy farmers fund research in various ways through NDB. Some research is carried out at six dairy food research centers or three nutrition institutes across the U.S. Other projects are funded through directed research and competitive grants programs, Reiff explains further.

In its competitive grants programs, NDB organizes an advisory committee of scientists to review and evaluate the scientific quality of research proposals. The panel of scientists commits its time twice a year to review proposals for NDB. It will meet Feb. 27-28 in Chicago to review 65 proposals and 22 letters of intent submitted by researchers from across the U.S. Proposals are thorough plans detailing exactly how the project will proceed and what the research is expected to accomplish. Letters of intent are brief summaries to see if NDB might be interested in funding an area of research. Researchers submitting a letter of intent judged to have potential for helping dairy farmers are asked to prepare a full proposal on the idea.

"The committee helps rate the best proposals — the ones with the most scientific merit. The scientists determine of the objectives are realistic and if the methods outlined in the proposal will really accomplish what the researchers have set out to do. They also determine if the budget is adequate and if the researcher has a clear enough understanding to do the project and complete it with sound results," says Bob Bursey, head of NDB's dairy foods and nutrition research program.

"After the scientists' results are tallied, the dairy farmers who serve on NDB's research committee review the proposals and ratings, recommending use of check-off dollars only to fund those projects most likely to eventually sell more dairy products," Reiff says.

This year's Science Advisory Committee consists of Bob Marshall, University of Missouri; Bob Bremel, University of Wisconsin; Harry Farrell, USDA; Floyd Schanbacher, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center; Mike Doyle, University of Georgia; Bruce Harte, Michigan State University; Mike Mangino, The Ohio State University; Don McMahon, Utah State University; Rich Hartel, University of Wisconsin; Bill Sandine, Oregon State University. Their areas of specialty include food processing, frozen desserts, milk composition, food chemistry, food safety, food packaging, dairy proteins and dairy starter cultures.

The National Dairy Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, was established in 1938 to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry's position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

FEED SAVINGS. Customers report 1/2 to 2 lbs. per 100 birds/day — over $10,000 per year saved on a 100,000 bird house. Year after year!

TROUGH DESIGN. High tensile steel for strength. No feed buildup or waste like chain trough.

NO RE-GRADING of feed. Due to our design. Chain lets birds pick over feed while feeder runs.

REMOVES FEED. Our auger slowly revolves, keeping old and new feed blended. Chain doesn't, so feed can get stale.

REPAIR & MAINTENANCE. Once needs the least of all feeders. Easy splicing with auger connector, and no troublesome corners or chain guides to replace. Saves money and time year after year.

SIMPLE OPERATION. "Push-Pull" Power Units with low HP motor are located along the feeder line as needed. Have hardened steel gears for trouble-free life. Microprocessor control lets you program feeding time to the second.

EASY AUGER CONNECTOR. Allows fast and simple installation, also quick and easy repair of auger if ever necessary. Auger and trough are both warranted 5 full years. Chain feeders are not.

Egg producers have been putting up with obsolete chain feeders far too long. Now there's a better way: Chore-Time's proven ULTRAFLO Cage Feeding System. Since introduction, more than 80% of the top 54 egg producers* have gone to ULTRAFLO. A lot of smaller ones have too.

They've all looked at the advantages and chosen ULTRAFLO. That's because it makes them more profitable. Total egg production and egg size—these are the best benefits of our complete feeding system.

Why not check out the facts for yourself? Contact us now—or ask any producer who owns ULTRAFLO.

Because the only negative comments about our feeding system come from our competition—not from our customers.

Reproduction, Nutrition Highlight Dairy Day II

Veterinarian Milliken gave some practical advice in determining heat detections and watching for post-freshing infections.

Reviewing some of the familiar advices — such as providing solid, non-skid footing, making sure animals aren't unhealthy, watching between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., and other similar precautions — Milliken said cycles can be set up in which one problem can lead to another.

He said a familiar cycle is when a cow or heifer gets lame, for whatever reason, she will not show heats well, and she will lose weight which can also cause her to not show heats, even after the lameness is corrected.

He said also that efforts must be made to make sure that what is thought a cow is getting nutrient-wise, is really what absorbing into her system.

For example, Milliken said that copper can be in two forms copper-sulfide and copper-oxide, with one form being easier for the cow to uptake than the other.

Also, excessive amounts of other minerals and nutrients or unwanted materials, can interfere with the uptake of desired nutrients in the intestine.

For example, only 40 percent of all the selenium ingested by a cow at any time will be taken into the system.

There are receptor sites along the cell walls in the intestine which carry the desired nutrients into the blood stream. However, if another chemical or mineral is present that attaches to the receptor site, it blocks the transport of the desired materials.

There are 16 different materials which can interfere with the cow's ability to absorb copper.

Most of the minerals can be tested for either by serum or whole blood tests, while there is no test for manganese.

Some of the two major problems with cow reproduction are cystic ovaries and infection of the uterus, whatever the cause.

Though it's not a good sign, pus at the vulva does not necessarily indicate a uterine problem, he said.

"Normally I don't like to see pus after 30 days, but if you do see it, have it checked before treating or taking any action on your own," Milliken said.

Do not be quick to self-diagnose and treat the animal, Milliken said.

Heifer Fundraising Meeting Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Southeast Pennsylvania Volunteer Heifer Project Committee from the Lancaster-Lebanon area is sponsoring a Heifer Project International fund-raising banquet at the Farm and Home Center on Tuesday, April 28, at 7 p.m.

The local committee has been in existence since the formation of Heifer Project International in 1944. At that time the gathering of animals for shipment was the top priority. That emphasis still exists today.

The project is thankful for all the donated animals by farmers and churches from the area. They also have expanded their committee's activities to include educational and fund-raising events. The project's extended goal is to introduce more people to the needs of Heifer Project International.

The speaker for the evening is Sule Umaru from the country of Cameroon in Africa. He is a member of the Fulani tribe that was living in the area of Lake Nyos when the lake released high levels of carbon dioxide, killing 1,700 people and all livestock in that area on August 21, 1986. Sometime later Sule, being the only English speaking tribal member, was introduced to Heifer Project International. History now speaks on how education and animals were provided to the Fulani tribe.

Please fill in the enclosed reservation form and return by March 20, 1992. The cost for a table of 8 is $125.00. Mail the reservation and a check payable to Heifer Project International to Mark Nestle-roth. Tickets will be mailed to you and be given to anyone of your choosing.

Thank you for your consideration and support to provide animals to poor farmers of the world so that they can learn to support themselves. We hope to see you at this year's banquet.

For more information, contact Nancy B. Brown, Committee Chairman, Heifer Project International, 453 State Street, Lancaster, Pa. 17603.

to Coatesville Producer's Co-op. From the late 1950s to about 1965, the number of hens declined. From 1965 until 1980, Menno L. concentrated on dairy milk production, but when his son Dennis L. took over the farm, he built a 60,000 layer house. Dennis, his wife and three sons continue to care for the layers.

Dennis Forry's great grandfather, John M. Forry, purchased the the Manheim farm in 1911. He started with a flock of 300 Leghorn layers. Benjamin H., Dennis's grandfather, built a chicken house during the 1930s for 1,100 layers. B. Musser Flory expanded in in 1966 when he converted the laying house to accomodate broilers and he built a new chicken house to raise a combined total of 60,000 birds.

In 1978, Dennis L. came into the operation. He bought another farm and built a 60,000-bird house. In 1986, he added a second house for a combined total of 80,000 layers, which he continues to operate.

Three generations

Victor Wheelock, Chambersburg; John O. Stoltzfus, Lancaster; and Robert Brubaker, Manheim; operate farms that have been in the family for three generations.

Although the Wheelocks do not live in Lancaster County, they are members of the Lancaster County Poultry Association and well known in the state. Ellis Wheelock started in 1930 with approximately 50 chickens in Warren. His wife dressed the chickens and sold eggs to businesses and from house to house.

His son, Walter, helped with the chickens and later started raising turkeys, which he dressed and sold for Thanksgiving and Christmas. In 1953, Walter started a poultry business with 500 chickens in Chambersburg. He continued to increase the flock and started a small hatchery with six Jamesway incubators. The business expanded until he was able to hatch 100,000 pullet chicks per week.

When Walter died, his son Victor took over the business and increased the size of the hatchery that now has capacity for 8 million pullet chicks a year.

John O. Stoltzfus's grandfather, John D., started with 3,000 layers at 148 Marticville Road, Lancaster, in 1950. The layers were gradually increased to 70,000 in 1972 by Samuel Z. Presently, John O. has 44,000 birds. He said, "We are growing a larger bird so the houses are full in eight weeks."

Three generations of Robert Brubakers have raised poultry at Valley View Farm in Manheim. Paul and Martha Brubaker started with two broiler houses in 1963. He raised more than six million birds for Victor Weaver Inc., before his retirement in 1980.

His son Bob built two 24,000 square foot broiler houses in 1969 and expanded to four houses in 1977. In 1990, Bob and Lois formed a partnership with their son Bob Jr., who will marry this year. The Brubakers have purchased a farm with a 85,000-pullet house for Bob Jr. and his wife to manage.

The two Manheim poultry operations are located at 1908 Valley Road, and at 2871 N. Colebrook Rd.

Bob Sr. said, "We have seen many different ideas and feeding programs over the years, some experimental, some with limited success, and some with vast improvements. Despite the changes in the past two decades, we feel our chicken houses and equipment are still comparable and competitive with new broiler houses and should last for many more years. We now contract with Tyson Foods."

Second generation awards

Three families received second generation awards for keeping the poultry business in the family.

Last year, Donald and Luann Brubaker took over the family poultry business located in Strasburg. Beaver Creek Farms was started by Harold and Miriam Brubaker in 1952 with 3,600 layers in an old three-story bank barn located between Beaver Creek and Little Beaver Road.

In 1959, the Brubakers built a house for 8,000 pullets, which they raised for Dekalb. In 1961, they built another house to raise a total of 16,000 pullets.

The Brubakers switched to broilers in 1967 and raised 22,000 broilers for Miller and Bushong and later Pennfield. Another house built in 1974 increased the operation to 56,000. Harold died in 1989. Donald and his mother worked together until Miriam retired. When Donald took over last year, he built another house, increasing the operation to 90,500.

Esh Egg Farm was started in 1964 by Samuel B. Esh in Gordonville. He started with 5,040 birds in stair step cages. When he first graded eggs, the grader did six cases each hour. These eggs were transported by pony cart to community customers and sold at farmer's markets. In 1974, cages were changed to three-tier to house 12,000 birds.

Now son David expanded and processes eggs from 100,000 birds. They pack 50 cases per hour and eggs are delivered to five surrounding states.

Penns Peaceful Meadow Farm was begun in 1978 by J. Harold and Jean Musser. The Mt. Joy operation began with a 60,000 layer house. A partnership was formed in 1979 and another 60,000 layer house built. In 1983, A.I. Fluenza wiped out both houses. In 1984, one house was destroyed by Dennis Eby, Gap, and Dennis Flory, Manheim, receive Poultry Family Spirit Awards from Jay W. Irwin, county Extension director emeritus.

State Protects 23 Farms

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Agricultural Land Preservation Board approved easement purchases for 23 farms in nine counties, protecting nearly 2,288 acres of prime farmland from commercial development.

It was the single largest number of farms targeted for preservation since the program was established in 1989. A total of 14,519 acres in 13 counties has been preserved in the program's first three years.

"The number of farms that have been purchased shows that more farmers are becoming interested in the program, and, as a result, some very productive farms are participating," said State Agriculture Secretary and Board Chairman Boyd E. Wolff.

The board approved farm purchases in the following counties: Berks, Bucks, Cumberland, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Montgom-

A breakdown of the properties — by county, owner, township, acreage, and purchase cost — follows:

Dairy Food Safety Concerns Drive Regulatory, Herd Health Concerns

KARL BERGER

Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Recent changes in the health regulations governing milk production and a continuing focus on residue prevention efforts reflect continuing concern — both valid and unfounded — about the safety of the nation's milk supply, according to dairy industry officials who deal with this issue.

Local dairymen must cope with a number of new rules derived from changes to the Pasteurized Milk Ordinance, a federal regulation governing the sale of milk. They also are being encouraged to embrace a voluntary residue prevention program, at least in part, as a way of heading off further restrictions on the availability of antibiotics and other drugs.

The prevention program, developed jointly by the American Veterinary Medical Association and the National Milk Producers Federation, identifies 10 areas in which farmers should concentrate their efforts, including herd health, drug storage, and the use of screening tests to verify lack of residues. It was designed to be a cooperative effort among farmers, their veterinarians, and fieldmen for the milk handlers.

None of the recommended practices are new and many of them already were in use on most farms, according to Dr. William Sischo, an extension veterinarian at Penn State University. Nevertheless, he said, nearly every dairymen would benefit from the exercise of going over the details of the program.

"It won't be effective as a regulatory tool," Sischo said. "But it is a good program in general for people to sort out how they manage herd health."

Farmers have other reasons to participate in the program, according to Doug Carmel, an extension veterinarian at the University of Maryland.

Strong participation by farmers will lessen the pressure on the federal Food and Drug Administration to take more drugs off the market and to limit the use of the so-called "extra label" policy, Carmel said.

Such participation also will gain points for the dairy industry in the ongoing struggle for the trust of the impressionable consumer.

"I think consumers are demanding a food supply that's free of residues," Carmel said. "A lot of that fear (concerning the presence of animal drugs, hormones, pesticides, and other contaminants) is unfounded, but we're not dealing with facts. We're dealing with emotion against fact."

The safety of the nation's milk supply has been questioned in front-page articles in the "Wall Street Journal" and other prominent newspapers in recent years. Recently, a television station in northeastern Pennsylvania aired a program that featured a short segment on alleged problems with residues and other contaminants, according to Jan Carson, a Pennsylvania Farmers Association spokesman.

Finally, there are some dairymen who will not have a choice as to whether or not to use the program. Changes in the Pasteurized Milk Ordinance (PMO) will require participation from farmers found in violation of residue standards.

The PMO changes represent another side of the residue issue: the big stick of rules and regulation, according to Sischo. However, like the quality assurance program, the regulatory changes encompass many things that already are common practice in the industry.

Beginning in January, milk handlers were required to test all tankers of milk for traces of the beta-lactam family of antibiotics, which includes penicillin. However, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, the region's largest, already was doing so, as were a number of other cooperatives and companies, according to Don Breiner, the cooperative's quality and field services manager.

The handlers also must sample loads at random for the presence of other drugs. Many already were.

The results of such screening tests and the identification of producers responsible for any residues that are detected must be passed along to the state officials who oversee milk safety. Beginning July 1, the PMO requires that farmers found in violation must have their permits to market Grade A milk revoked for two days. A second such violation within a 12-month period requires a four-day suspension. And a third violation could result in the permanent suspension of the permit at the discretion of state authorities, Breiner said.

Again, these rules — with the exception of the permanent suspension — are nothing new. In recent years, the widespread practice of area cooperatives has been to not pay their members for milk found to be tainted with residues and also to charge these violators with the cost of dumping tankers of milk if they have become contaminated as well, according to Breiner.

Because the milk from most farms is picked up every other day, the dumping of a shipment of milk is, in effect, a two-day suspension, he said. The cooperatives would like state authorities to accept that this policy satisfies the new PMO requirement, at least for first-time offenders.

"We're hoping that the states are going to accept that rather than issue a two-day suspension," said Jim Reeder, Breiner's counterpart at Maryland and Virginia Cooperative Milk Producers Association.

For now, the major focus of detection efforts remains the beta-lactam family. Any positive results from the quick screening tests used to check every load are verified using the officially recognized disc assay for these antibiotics, Breiner noted. These screening tests also are being used to check for the presence of other types of drugs, but with these the official verification test involves far more expensive and time consuming laboratory work, Breiner noted.

Official verification is important for legal reasons. "If I dump based on a Pen-zyme test or a Charm test, I could be taken to court because they're not official tests," Breiner said.

However, FDA officials and representatives from the Association of Analytical Chemists reportedly are rushing to approve some of the screening tests as official for regulatory work.

Yet another PMO change, set to take effect July 1, 1993, will lower the allowable level of somatic cells in milk from 1,000,000 per milliliter to 750,000. Although the vast majority of area dairymen maintain herd averages well below this count, the change will affect a handful of problem operations, the cooperative officials noted.

Expert System For Apple Growers

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The Penn State Apple Orchard Consultant, an expert system for apple growers, has been updated and will be available for sale in mid-March.

The software, developed over four years by Penn State researchers, is one of the first expert systems available to fruit growers. It combines the knowledge of a wide variety of specialists and simulates the decision-making process they would use to solve problems, according to Jan McClure, coordinator of the Penn State expert systems development group.

Growers who use the Penn State Apple Orchard Consultant will have the knowledge of plant pathologists, entomologists, horticulturists, meteorologists and economists at their fingertips. They can bypass the phone and consult the computer system for advice on how to manage their orchards.

McClure says the system is more than a collection of data. It's not just a computerized production guide — it actually helps growers think through a problem.

The Apple Orchard Consultant can evaluate information, diagnose problems and symptoms and recommend action. Using the software program, growers create a profile of their own orchard. They update that profile daily with information on weather conditions, insects and diseases. When they present a problem to the system, it considers all the variables and uses its storehouse of knowledge to offer recommendations.

New features for 1992 include a separate spray record-keeping system and easier-to-use weather input screens. Growers now can print out weather information and view infection periods for each disease.

Also included this year are more data on predator-pest interactions and information on the European apple sawfly and San Jose scale.

The researchers worked with 27 apple growers in Pennsylvania to test the system and to make it more helpful and user friendly.

Although it was designed for growers in Pennsylvania, producers in states as far away as Washington are finding the expert system helpful.

The 1992 version of the Penn State Apple Orchard Consultant is available for $250 from the Expert Systems Development Group, The Pennsylvania State University, 501 Agricultural Sciences and Industries Building, University Park, PA 16802. The software can be used with Macintosh or MS/DOS computers.

Other expert systems available from Penn State include Bee Aware (honey bee diseases and pests), which sells for $35, and PLEX (potato leafhopper on alfalfa), which costs $75. MAIZE, a system for field corn, will be finished this spring.

Cool Flying At The Farm Show

On the parking lot of the state Farm Show, groundworkers hook up airconditioning units to a crane helicopter (a Sikorsky S-58T). The units were then flown and settled down into place for use in the complex's heating cooling system. The unusual sight is the result of work being done to renovate the Farm Show complex, which has been a several-year, $8 million project, projected to be finished in October. The renovation has included, in addition to work on the heating-cooling system, a $2.7 million re-roofing of the large arena, about $500,000 for new lighting and sound systems, and $3.2 million to build an additional livestock exhibition hall. The new hall is to add 82,000 square feet for a total of 460,000 square feet of indoor exhibit space.

Environmental concerns

Extension agent Leon Ressler opened up the day-long seminar by encouraging farmers to prepare for water shortages before a severe drought forces them to make emergency changes in poultry operations.

Ressler said that the Palmer Hydrological Drought Index indicates that the area might be in a 30-year drought pattern. Water conservation steps should be taken now to make sure water equipment is not dripping or clogged with particles.

For those using a misting system for cooling, he suggests, that water use be reduced and that water not suitable for drinking purposes be used. The switch to an air cooling system is suggested.

Now is also the time, for farmers to consult a hydrogeologist to do fracture trace mapping to locate the best water supply on the property if another well needs to be dug.

Nutrient management with alternative crops is another environmental issue farmers must face.

"We need more suppliers for manure marketing," Ressler stressed. He said that studies show that the U.S. phosphate supply will last only 20 to 25 years.

"If we can hang in another 20 years, I think phosphorus will become valuable," Ressler said.

Composting poultry

Dr. John Schwartz, county extension director, explained the necessity of proper composting techniques for daily poultry mortality.

"If farmers can't do composting from a tractor seat, it probably won't get done," Schwartz said. A bin that can be reached by a tractor to scoop the birds and compost material should be constructed.

Studies show that the most effective compost area must have a roof and a concrete floor to eliminate leeching into the soil. Pressure treated lumber should be used to construct bins with a maximum 5 feet high by 8 feet wide and a 6 feet depth.

The compost recipe needs 1 1/2 times more chicken manure than dead chicken material with .10 carbon such as straw, shredded newspapers, or leaves. Although air is needed in the compost pile, a properly constructed compost pile will not have fly, rodent, odor or snooping animal problems.

If there is at least six to eight inches of manure on top of dead poultry, it will keep animals from digging in the area.

Temperatures indicate that after 7 to 10 days the compost should be turned or put into a second bin for at least 30 days before spreading on the field.

Several county farmers have built compost bins for a cost of $3,000 to $5,000. Government cost sharing funds are available for up to 50 percent of the cost.

Rodent control

Since rodents are heavy carriers of salmonella, rat and mouse control has become a prime concern of poultry farmers.

With infrared filming of poultry houses, Larry Kendall of Purina Mills showed how severe rodent problems can become on farms.

"It's an ongoing challenge that takes commitment and knowledge to rid rodents from your operation," Kendall said. "Research shows that poultry feed is the hardest thing to get rodents to leave and eat bait."

To entice rodents, bait must be more palatable than poultry feed and be placed between rodents and the feed supply because rodents will not go out of their way to find bait.

Kendall explained the different types of bait used and how it causes rodents to die and the necessity to use safety precautions when applying it.

Other concerns

Other topics addressed during the day-long seminar included the following:

- Ventilating curtain sided poultry houses by Dr. William Weaver, professor and head of poultry science at Penn State.

- The 6/85 strain — a new live vaccine for mycoplasma gallisepticum by Dr. Keith Honegger.

- Update on how the Chamber of Commerce is working for farmers to create a favorable environment, by Jay Howes, manager of Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

- Egg promotion for the 90s by Kathy Matusik, American Egg Board in Illinois.

- Are we going to put animal interests ahead of people rights? by Cathleen Marquardt, chair and found of Putting People First.

The annual Poultry Progress Day was sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Lancaster County Poultry Association.

Stranded Motorist Wooed From City To Farm

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Arlene Maule found her husband in a way mothers warn their daughters against — a stranger on the highway.

No, she wasn't a pickup, and he wasn't a hitch hiker. But 17 years ago, Arlene was stranded along the roadside with a flat tire when Bill Maule, a milk truck driver pulled over to offer his help.

Although names were not exchanged, Bill did manage to learn that the motorist worked in Kennett Square. After he finished his milk route, he returned to his Quarryville farm to change his clothes. Then he drove around Kennett Square looking for the car on which he had changed the tire.

It took him almost a half day before he located it. He wrote a note introducing himself as a Penn State graduate with an ag economics degree. He told her that he was a widower with three small children whose wife had died of cancer, and asked Arlene to meet him.

But Arlene, a school teacher for 10 years, was not so easily enticed.

She wasn't sure what kind of "wacko" this stranger might be so she ignored the note. Several weeks later, she found Bill waiting by her car.

"Leave me alone," she said as she flashed her diamond ring at him. "I'm engaged."

Discouraged, Bill returned to farming and driving milk truck.

When Arlene broke her engagement with her boyfriend several months later, she remembered Bill. On impulse, she called information for his telephone number and phoned him at 10 p.m.

"We talked until 3 a.m.," Arlene recalled. Within the next year, the couple married and Arlene adopted Bill's three children, ages 7, 4, and 22 months. One year later, the couple had a daughter.

For the Maules, there are no stories of the "evil stepmother."

Bill said, "The kids loved her from the beginning. She's been a true mother."

With a sparkling smile and a musical laugh, Arlene entertains others with tales of her transition from city to country.

"It took me about five years to adjust, but now I wouldn't go back to the city," Arlene said.

At first she found it difficult to deal with rural living. In Philadelphia, she had lived close to three major shopping centers. She missed the shopping, but surprisingly she found that there is less privacy on a farm than in the city.

She said, "There isn't much privacy on the farm because feed salesmen and truckers are driving in and out the lane all the time. If they don't find someone in the barn, they come to the house, so I learned to get up and get dressed instead of lounging in a housecoat."

When the Maules were first married, Bill worked for his father on the farm for about five years and then purchased the cattle and equipment. It wasn't until 1990, that the Maules moved to the family homestead, which has been in the Maule family for four generations.

Stories abound about the farm, which is said to be the oldest working farm in Colerain Township. It is said that when the house was being built during the Civil War, the boom of the cannons from the Gettysburg battle about 90 miles away could be heard.

It is said that the house was built one foot each day. The solid plaster fieldstone walls are still difficult in which to pound nails. The iron locks on the doors come from the Christiana Riot House, a former stop of the Underground Railroad.

An outdoor window was turned into shelves and allows Arlene to keep an eye on what's happening in the family room while she is preparing meals in the kitchen.

Stranded Motorist Wooed From City To Farm

Seventeen years ago, Arlene and Bill Maule met when Arlene had a flat tire along Route 1 and Bill stopped to help her. Bill, who was a widower with three young children, convinced city-bred Arlene to marry him and become a full-fledged farmer's wife.

Seven layers of old wallpaper and paint were removed from the walls throughout the house. Then Arlene stenciled the walls in various patterns. Shown is the formal dining room.

The front windows stretch from floor to ceiling. The bottom part of the window has glass that slides up and wooden doors that open and close. Arlene said that she was told that the windows were built in this matter so that a coffin could be moved in and out of the parlor for family funerals.

Touches of love and style are evident throughout the 1862 farm house. Arlene has removed the layers of wallpaper and paint on the walls, replastered the holes, painted and stenciled the high ceiling walls. She found that a barn scraper worked best for removing the paint and paper. She learned to spackle and plaster ceilings. She worked all hours of the night to strip paint with a heat gun and putty knife. The carved woodwork is painted in contrasting colors. And she has made curtains for several of the rooms.

The country decor is filled with garage sale finds and family hand-me-downs that seem specially selected for their coordinated appearance.

Because the original kitchen was too dark, the Maules had an addition added. Now the kitchen opens into a dining and sitting area with a fireplace and large windows that face the pond on one side and profuse flower beds and open fields on the other sides.

Arlene is known for her warm, outgoing personality and loves to entertain. "Everything that I am, I owe to my mother," Arlene said.

"She was the best cook around, and she taught me everything I know."

Farm work

When Arlene first married, her mother-in-law warned Arlene: "Never start helping the men in the barn or they will expect it all the time."

Arlene confided sheepishly that she didn't take her mother-in-law's advice and so she does carry milk in pails from the 53 cows, forks hay, makes sure the cows are in the right staunchion, and rakes hay with the tractor. So far, she is able to convince the full-time hired man and her husband that she is not a permanent worker.

Although Bill's dad had Guernseys, Bill made a gradual shift to all Holsteins, "whose disposition aren't as nice but they are reliable milkers."

The Maules raise corn, alfalfa, and wheat on 120 acres. They have a staunchion barn and the second oldest silo in Lancaster County.

Although Arlene took five years off from school teaching when the children were young, she is now teaching computers part time. She has taught 23 years in a parochial school and finds great fulfillment in being able to teach the children of former students. She also finds it rewarding to see how some former troublesome students turn into stable, law-abiding citizens.

Arlene said, "I try to make the classroom as pleasant as possible for students because you don't know what they go home to face."

Her efforts have not gone unnoticed. Arlene's home is filled with gifts and she has numerous notes and letters from students and parents in appreciation for her caring attitude and her ability "to make learning fun."

Farm Women

When Arlene married Bill, her mother-in-law said, "You're a farmer now so you must join Farm Women."

Today, city-bred Arlene is a full-fledged farmer's wife and president of the Lancaster County Society 15 of Farm Women.

Society 15 was established in 1938. The society started the Solanco Fair, the only one in the county that is considered an agricultural fair since they do not permit amusement rides. The society raises funds by selling funnel cakes at the Solanco Fair and at other annual community events. With part of the money, they provide one $500 scholarship and two $100 bonds to students in ag-related subjects.

Arlene said most of the Farm Women members are elderly so she can learn so much from them. "They have been through it. They make me feel so comfortable."

Arlene recalls that she grew up appreciating the older generation because her grandfather lived in their home for many years.

Whether it's old or young people, Arlene has the ability to make each person feel special. "I love people. Everyday I learn something from someone," Arlene said. "Life is so interesting."

In the parlour, windows stretch from floor to ceiling. The lower wooden doors may be opened or shut. The bottom windowpane may be raised. The Maules were told that the windows were built in this way in 1862 so that a coffin could be easily moved in and out for family funerals.

Organization. That was the point.

That was the purpose for assembling the printed directions with a map, the hotel room confirmation, and a newspaper clipping containing some information needed for a program. Having carefully folded those three pertinent items together into the hotel's confirmation envelope, I'd tucked the little packet into a section of my handbag "filing cabinet."

In fact, after arriving home after midnight and a long day of meetings the night before, I'd even taken a few moments to jot down a short list of items. These things needed to be gathered or attended to before we departed the next day for the annual convention of our Pennsylvania Holstein cattle association.

This envelope of information topped the list.

The PHA annual meeting is one we rarely miss, a joint opportunity to update our education and knowledge of the dairy breeding business, as well as visiting with Holstein friends from across the state. This year's late February meeting was in the Pittsburgh area, a four-hour-plus drive out the Turnpike.

Before packing anything else, the envelope with all the pertinent data was in my handbag, along with checks that would be deposited at the neighborhood branch of the bank on our way.

Last detail to be taken care of before we went out the door was writing down the hotel's name, address, and phone number, to be left at the house and the barn in case of some cow or equipment emergency.

"You have the directions?" asked The Farmer as we headed up the road toward the bank.

"Yep," I confirmed.

We whipped through the bank's drive-thru and a half-hour later swung westward onto the Turnpike. Somewhere between the Gettysburg Pike and the Carlisle exits, I reached down to retrieve my envelope of data and check exactly where around Pittsburgh it was we were headed.

The envelope was gone. Absent. Missing. Nowhere in sight.

(You'd already figured that out, right?)

I dug through the other sections of my handbag, hoping I'd accidentally misplaced it. Not a sign. I dug through the coats, camera bag and miscellaneous stuff in the back seat, hoping... hoping... hoping I'd somehow gotten the little white envelope tangled in there.

No such luck.

Suddenly the realization struck that we were headed west, with a car full of clothes, coats and related paraphernalia - and I, who always carefully gathers directions and related papers or tickets before we depart for such journeys, had only a general sense of the exact destination. A vision of driving around Pittsburgh for the next two days hunting the proper Sheraton Inn flashed uncomfortably through my mind.

"We can just stop and call the hotel," said The Farmer.

"Except that the hotel's phone number is on the confirmation paper, which is probably on the kitchen table," I sighed. When I removed the papers to write down the hotel's phone number, just before going out the door, I must have simply forgotten to put them back in our hurry to leave.

"Well, we'll watch for a Sheraton along the Turnpike, get off and ask them," suggested The Farmer, who remains calm over things like leaving for a destination with no directions. Another option was to call back home and ask for the number, if we were close to a phone when someone would be close to the barn office. But miles later, not a single Sheraton had been spotted.

Fate intervened. Two hours into our trip, and nearly time to try phoning home, a service area popped up along the highway. In the fat phone book inside the door was an 800-line for the Sheraton Worldwide. A friendly voice on the other end not only gave me the correct phone number, but offered directions right to the hotel's entrance.

Thanks, Sheraton Inns Worldwide, for a bail-out for this farm wife.

I didn't even have to pay for the phone call.

Carol Stark

As the weather is getting warmer and time to start an outside cleanup, it is still nice to come into dinner to a warm meal. Cabbage is inexpensive right now so why not try some cabbage recipes?

Stuffed Cabbage Rolls Country Style

- 1/2 cup cornbread stuffing mix
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
- 1/4 pound bulk pork
- 1/4 pound ground pork
- 1/2 cup tomato sauce
- 1 tablespoon water
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed
- 4 large cabbage or romaine leaves
- 1 beaten egg
- 1 small onion, finely chopped
- 1 stalk celery, finely chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- dash of pepper
- 1/2 cup water

For sauce: In a nonmetal bowl stir together tomato sauce, 1 tablespoon water, sugar, basil and oregano. Micro-cook covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 1 1/2 minutes. Set aside.

Remove center vein of cabbage or of romaine leaves, keeping each leaf in one place. Place leaves in a 12x7 1/2 x2 inch baking dish. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Micro-cook covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 1 to 3 minutes or until leaves are limp.

For filling: stir together egg, chopped onion, chopped celery, salt, pepper, breading and seasoning. Add meat; mix well. Divide meat mixture into four equal portions. Place one portion of meat mixture on each cabbage or romaine leaf. If using small leaves, overlap 2 leaves for each portion. Fold in sides. Starting at unfolded edge, roll up each leaf, making sure folded edges are included in roll.

Arrange rolls in a 12x7 1/2 x2 inch baking dish. Pour 1/2 cup water over rolls. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Micro cook, covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 14 to 17 minutes, rotating the dish a half turn after 8 minutes. Remove rolls to a serving dish. Reheat sauce, covered, on 100 percent power (HIGH) for 1 to 1 1/2 minutes or until warmed through. Spoon some sauce over rolls; pass the remaining sauce. Makes 2 servings.

Research Guides Meat Board

CHICAGO, Ill. — The National Live Stock and Meat Board has used research as its cornerstone for programs since 1922 and in the area of nutrition research, the Meat Board has been a leader in establishing meat as part of a healthful, nutritious diet.

This year, the Meat Board Nutrition Research Subcommittees approved 12 research projects that will provide the industry additional knowledge to support the role of meat in the diet. Four beef checkoff-funded projects were approved and eight additional projects representing leveraged investments of beef, veal, pork and lamb dollars were approved. Ten universities will conduct the research, totaling more than $436,000, focusing on the nutritional role of meat in the normal diet, nutrient interaction, bioavailability and other diet/health issues.

According to Bob Norris, Meat Board chairman, the research results will help answer questions important to nutrition and health professionals and help the industry respond more directly to specific issues.

"Our meat industry programs utilize data collected from research to create messages that communicate meat's proper role in a healthful diet," Norris says. "Research works behind the scenes to give our industry the factual foundation it needs to conduct our demand-building programs."

Lamb Recipes You're Certain To Love

American lamb is a prime source of high quality protein, vitamins, and minerals. Its protein is nutritionally complete with all eight essential amino acids in the proper ratio. Lamb is high in B vitamins, niacin, zinc, and iron. Fifty-seven percent of the iron is far more usable in the body than the type of iron found in most other foods.

Compared to other meats, lamb contains little marbling. Since most of the fat that lamb has is on the outside edges, it is easily trimmed. That means fewer calories — only 176 in an average three-ounce serving. A recent study showed that 56 percent of fat in lamb is saturated. The remainder is monosaturated or polyunsaturated, the "good" fat in one's diet.

Give yourself the wholesome nutrition you want — eat fresh American Lamb.

LAMB PATTIES WITH DILL SAUCE

6 slices bacon
1 beaten egg
½ cup rolled oats
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1½ pounds ground lamb
1 tablespoon chopped onion

Wrap a partially cooked bacon slice around the side of each patty and fasten with a toothpick. Place patties on an unheated rack in a broiler pan. Broil 4 to 5 inches from heat to desired doneness, turning once. Takes 12 to 14 minutes total time for medium done.

Meanwhile in a saucepan, cook 1 tablespoon chopped onion in the butter until tender but not brown. Stir in Parmesan cheese, flour, dillweed, paprika, and ½ teaspoon salt. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir until thick and bubbly. Cook one minute more. Spoon mixture over patties. Makes 6 servings.

In response to a question for Red Velvet Cake, we have been swamped with recipes. Although we have printed many of them, we do not have space to print them all. Unfortunately, we do not have the time to test recipes so we do not know whether or not the best ones have been printed. But here is one with an interesting story that we thought you would enjoy.

The recipe is from Bernice Sabo of Flemington, N.J. She said that the recipe comes from a woman who dined at the Waldorf Astoria and asked for the recipe. When she received the recipe she was charged $600 for it. The lawyer whom she consulted said that she would need to pay for it, but she is able to share the recipe with others. This happened many years ago. Since then this recipe has been passed from friend to friend and published in cookbooks with the story.

Bernice said the cake is very rich and moist. She hopes our readers will enjoy it.

RED VELVET CAKE

1 cup Crisco
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
2¼ cups flour, sifted 5 times
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup red food coloring
2 tablespoons cocoa
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon baking soda

Cream sugar and Crisco; add eggs and beat 1 minute. Add vanilla to buttermilk; then add alternately with flour. Make a paste of coloring, cocoa, and salt. Add to mixture. Mix vinegar and baking soda and add. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 30 minutes in two 8-inch square pans. Serves 12 to 16.

Icing:

1 cup milk
7 teaspoons flour
1 cup butter
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 teaspoons almond paste, optional
Kirsch (optional)

Cook milk and flour; refrigerate. Cream butter, sugar, and vanilla. Add slowly to flour and milk mixture. Icing is improved by adding almond paste and Kirsch to taste.

Beans belong in today's diet. They are among the lowest-cost sources of protein and contain iron, B vitamins, fiber, and very little fat.

Americans rely heavily on meats to plan meals. But beans can be a cost-saving and healthy alternative.

Vegetable sources of protein like dry beans, peas, and lentils have an advantage over animal sources of protein because they are very low in fat.

Too much fat in the diet has been linked to health problems like obesity and heart disease. Overall fat consumption has risen 24 percent since the beginning of the century and now approximately 40 percent of our total calories come from fat.

Some people may think that beans are a poorer source of protein than meat. Beans don't have sufficient amounts of the essential amino acids which make up proteins. But combining beans with grains can make their protein value equal to meat.

Creative use of beans not only stretches the food dollar without sacrificing protein, but also opens up a wide range of new eating experiences. Some powerful pairs include split pea soup and cornbread sticks, pickled corn and kidney bean salad, baked beans and steamed brown bread, and navy bean soup with bran muffins.

Canned kidney beans, garbanzo beans, Great Northern beans and other legumes are convenient to use. Preparing dishes using dried beans, however, doesn't require a lot of time or skill and it can be less expensive. Dried beans must be soaked to replace the water lost in drying. Allow 4 cups of water for each cup of beans. Cover and let the beans soak overnight or bring the water and beans to a boil, cook 2 minutes, cover, remove from heat, and let stand 1 hour.

Most beans require 1 1/2 to 2 hours of gentle boiling to soften. A pressure cooker can cut the cooking time to 3 to 10 minutes. Avoid filling the cooker more than one-third full of beans and water because the beans will expand and foam could clog the vent.

One cup of dried beans equals two cups of cooked beans. Many bean recipes make several servings, so if you're cooking for one or two people, cut the recipe in half or plan to freeze some of the excess. Beans make rich soups and chowders. Any variety of beans cooked with or without other vegetables in plenty of liquid, and seasoned the way you like, will make a nourishing meal-in-a-bowl soup. Or stretch and enriched canned or homemade vegetable soup by adding cooked beans, plus more liquid if needed. If you do not have a favorite bean soup recipe, try the following recipe for a start.

Six Bean Soup

1/2 cup each: baby limas, small whites, blackeyes, garbanzos, pinks and light red kidney beans.
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery

1 clove garlic, crushed and minced
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 envelopes (2 oz. each) chicken noodle soup
1 cup chopped carrot
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/2 cup minced parsley
1/2 teaspoon fine herbs
1 cup fresh or canned tomatoes, chopped
Grated Parmesan cheese

Sort, rinse and soak beans. To maintain color integrity, soak white and colored beans separately. Drain. Cook onion, celery, carrot, green pepper, parsley and garlic in butter or margarine until soft. Combine cooked vegetables with soup mix, 2 quarts water, fine herbs and soaked beans. Simmer, covered about 1 hour to desired tenderness. Add tomatoes. Serve hot, sprinkled with Parmesan cheese. Makes 1 gallon.

Dairy Darling Follows Mother's And Aunt's Example

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
GAP (Lancaster Co.) — Eight-year-old Laura Blank is called a Lancaster County Dairy Darling. That means she helps Lancaster County Dairy Princess Robyn Groff hand out samples of cheese and milk punch to show others how good dairy products taste. Often Laura hands out stickers to children that say things such as "I love milk" or Milk is good for you!"

Laura lives on a farm named "Smiling Holsteins." It was named "Smiling Holsteins," Laura's mother explained, "Because we tell people, 'Our cows are happy to be making milk and now your job is to keep them happy by drinking milk.'"

Being part of the dairy princess royalty seems to run in Laura's family. Laura's mother, the former Joyce Stoltzfus, was the Lancaster County dairy princess in 1978-79. Laura's aunt, Becky Blank, was crowned Chester County dairy princess in June 1991, two weeks before Laura was named Lancaster County Dairy Darling.

Becky also credits Laura's mother for inspiring her to be a dairy princess. Becky was only four years old when Joyce was dairy princess. At that time, Joyce was dating Becky's brother, Cliff, whom she later married. Cliff often helped Joyce in dairy promotions by wearing a cow costume.

At the time, Becky was terrified when her brother dressed as a pink cow, but she thought it would be neat to wear a dairy princess crown.

Now that Becky is the Chester County Dairy Princess, she said, "It's even more fun than I thought it would be — and more work too."

Becky lives with her parents, Elam and Dorothy Blank on a 75-acre Parkesburg farm. They milk 50 Holsteins and Becky owns one cow. She is the youngest in the family of four brothers and one sister.

Laura's parents, Cliff and Joyce Blank, own 55 registered Holsteins and rent 60 tillable acres.

Laura's mother said that Laura was only six days old when she made her first trip to the barn. Her mother said, "We put her in a swing, and the sound of the vacuum running put her to sleep."

Laura has always loved being in the barn, but she doesn't help often because she needs to babysit her younger brothers while her dad, mother, and sister milk and feed the cows. She also sets the table so that when the family is finished with the barn chores, they can eat the meal their mother has in the oven.

Sometimes Laura becomes a "walking gate." That happens when the family moves 8 to 10 calves to a new area. The fence is a single strand fence that the calves do not notice immediately. So Laura and her sister and brothers stand behind the fence and move alongside the fence to keep the calves from breaking through. It takes about one hour to train the calves, and Laura said that it isn't a very fun job.

Last year, Laura showed a calf in the kiddie class at the Solanco Fair. She is happy that she will be nine years old on Sunday, March 8. That is old enough to join 4-H. Laura wants to join a 4-H dog obedience training club because she has an AKC German Shepherd puppy that her parents gave her for a birthday present.

Laura's job as Dairy Darling will be finished in June. Then her sister, Lisa, who is also 8 years old hopes to become a Dairy Darling. The two sisters are 10 months apart in age.

The opportunity to be a Dairy Princess Darling is open to any 8- to 10-year-old girl who lives on a dairy farm. According to Laura, "All you have to do is tell the dairy princess coordinator and then walk in front of the audience during the pageant and answer a few questions."

Four other girls in Lancaster County are also Dairy Darlings. Although the Dairy Darlings do not receive crowns like Dairy Princesses, they do wear banners.

Laura said that she hopes to be a dairy princess when she gets older. One time she got to wear her mother's crown. That happened when her Laura dressed as Bible character Queen Esther for church event. "I love wearing the crown," Laura said.

Lancaster County Dairy Darling Laura Blank drinks milk to keep her cows happy.

Although it has been 14 years since Joyce Stoltzfus Blank was Lancaster County Dairy Princess, she still has her crown, banner, and cow puppet that she used to tell children: "Clarabelle the cow is sad to see boys and girls drink root beer and orange drink. He likes to see them drink milk."

The Blanks raise AKC German Shepherds. Her the children play with them. From left: Daryl, 5; Laura, 8; Lisa, 8; and Dwayne, 3.

Cook's Question

Swiss-Style Mocha

- ½ cup instant coffee
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cocoa
- 1 cup nonfat dry milk

Combine and store in airtight container. For one serving, use 1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon of mix to 1 cup boiling water. Makes 24 servings.

ANSWER — Ralph Baer, Temple, requested a recipe for cup cheese that includes full instructions. Thanks to Joan Stump of Stump Hollow Dairy Goats, Telford, for sending recipes.

Cup Cheese

- 2½ gallons thick sour milk
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ½ cup water

Heat milk to 120 degrees or until it is too hot to hold your finger in it. Drain and allow to stand in cheesecloth bag until the next day. Crumble curds or put them through food processor until fine. Mix soda through cheese and place into a crock or large mixing bowl. Cover with a cloth and allow to stand 3 days at room temperature. Stir each morning and evening. At the end of the third day, the cheese should appear yellow and gummy, and have a sharp odor.

Set crock or bowl containing cheese in a boiler of hot water. Add salt and water, then stir until smooth. Pour into custard cups. When cold, spread on bread.

Crock Cheese

- 1 gallon thick sour milk
- 1½ tablespoons butter
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¾ cup cream
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda

Scald milk to 120 degrees or until too hot to put finger in it. Drain through a fine colander or cloth bag. Let stand overnight to drain thoroughly.

Place into a crock or deep bowl and crumble until fine. Add salt and mix well.

Cover with a cloth and set to ripen at room temperature for 3 days. Mix baking soda into the cheese and let stand for 3 hours.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The more than 20 million men and women who provide the food and fiber Americans use every day will be honored during National Agriculture Week March 15 through 21. National Agriculture Day is March 20.

"Without a national observance, it is too easy to forget the importance of the American food and agriculture industry in our daily lives," says Bud Porter, chairman of the nationwide celebration. "We forget that our food and agriculture industry puts food on our table, clothes on our back, and shelter over our heads each day."

National Agriculture Day, National Agriculture Week and National Women in Agriculture Day on March 19, coincide with the beginning of spring when thousands of farmers across the country are preparing their fields for planting. The annual observance is designed to direct attention to the important contributions made by the food and agriculture industry.

"For many Americans raised in the city, agriculture is as mysterious as a college level course in trigonometry," says Porter. "As a result, we have to help the public understand the challenges the industry faces in continuing to meet our food and fiber needs. We also must make them aware of the important stake they have in the future of our food and agriculture industry."

For example, Porter says the food and agriculture industry represents nearly 16 percent of the Gross National Product and an estimated 21 million jobs (or 17 percent of the total national work force). Yet approximately 90 percent of the industry's jobs are off the farm. According to Porter, this means that Americans don't have to live on a farm to have their livelihood depend on agriculture.

In fact, he says a large segment of the population depends on agriculture but have never been on a farm.

"Not many people are really aware of the connection — they see themselves as totally removed from agriculture, not realizing that their economic well-being as well as their daily sustenance is interwoven with our food and agriculture industry."

Porter is director of sales branches at Deere & Company, a farm implement manufacturer based in Moline, Ill. He is a board member of the Agriculture Council of America (ACA), the national coordinator of National Agriculture Day.

To mark National Agriculture Day and National Agriculture Week 1992, the fifth of a five-year series of original oil paintings has been created. "Sharing Our Finest" is the title of this year's painting, which depicts a farmers' market. Posters of the painting have been produced and distributed by a number of agricultural groups and state departments of agriculture across the country. In addition, countless number of activities will be held in conjunction with National Agriculture Week and National Agriculture Day, including shopping mall displays, agricultural teach-ins or educational programs and special breakfasts and luncheons recognizing the industry.

In Lincoln, Neb., for example, a special breakfast featuring state agricultural products will be held. Guests will be served food ranging from beef jerky to soy-fried donuts. And the York Area Chamber of Commerce will mark the occasion by sponsoring an Ag Day Exchange in which farmers and ranchers exchange jobs for a day with other area business people and vice versa. What's more, all state departments of agriculture will generate official proclamations of Agriculture Day from the nation's governors.

In Washington, D.C., a national proclamation will be signed by the President to show support for the food and agriculture industry. In addition, a reception will be held on Capitol Hill to remind legislators of the important role the industry plays in their state and national economies.

ACA is a broad-based membership organization of farmers and ranchers, local, state, and national commodity organizations, agribusinesses and other interests that work together to promote and build support for the food and agriculture industry.

For more information on National Agriculture Day and National Agriculture Week, write ACA at 1250 "Eye" Street, N.W., Suite 601, Washington, D.C. 20005. Or call (202) 682-9200.

PHILADELPHIA (Philadelphia Co.) — Embark on a voyage into spring as six acres of breathtaking gardens lead the way through "Horizons For Discovery," March 8 to 15 at the Philadelphia Flower Show.

The captivating sound of dancing fountains bounces off terra cotta rooftops as visitors approach the Show's 7,000 square foot Central Feature display. The great American Southwest is alive with color and motion in this enchanting mosaic of regional cultures, adobe structures and a desert garden. Fragrant, wisteria-laden trellises canopy your entry. Giant Saguro cacti, tipping the scales at 700 pounds each, stand like sentinels at the garden gate and lead the way to the Santa Fe-style Town Square. Inside, open-air shops, a cantina and the 16-foot Bell Tower surround you and beckon visitors to discover the magic that appears on the horizon.

From California to Tennessee, Maine to Hawaii, the talents of 18 of the nation's top flower arrangers from the Garden Club of America pay tribute to their region's claim to fame in "America Discovered". From traditional to abstract, each massive arrangement captures the spirit of America in flower.

Discover the extraordinary horticultural talents of 51 major landscape exhibitors. The lifesize "snapshot" of a scene from The Secret Garden evokes a return to innocence with its oversize plantings of pink, blue, yellow and white perennials. The memories of childhood continue as you encounter a topiary Humpty Dumpty taking afternoon tea in a treehouse.

The dreamy quality of these gardens takes a realistic turn as you explore the fascinating world of plant genetics. Navigate through the laboratory where the cutting edge of technological developments and the latest hybrids are unveiled. Witness the newest rage in garden design in the moonlit magic of Night Gardening; stroll through a popular contemporary garden, the Water Garden, and learn how to maximize your leisure time with lower maintenance plantings of ornamental grasses known as the "Hair of the Earth."

While the focus of today's garden is on newer and more unusual designs, you can also glimpse gardens of the past. Two classic gardens conjure up the sultry romance of The Great Gatsby era, and the great estates of the past with patterned beds and lush terraces. From New World to New Wave there is a gardening style, floral combination or botanical gem to excite one and all.

Windowboxes and bonsai, dinner table settings and miniature rooms, mammoth-sized flower arrangements and others the size of a thimble all vie for the coveted awards in this, the largest and most prestigious indoor flower show in the world. In addition to the 1,700 artistic and horticultural entries in the Competitive Class section, free lectures and demonstrations are presented by talented floral designers, photographers, and horticultural experts. For those who want to recreate some of the Show's garden scenes at home, 100 Marketplace vendors offer everything from potted plants and cut flowers to birdhouses and handmade baskets.

4-H Trains Young Entrepreneurs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Youngsters are developing business skills and discovering job opportunities in the 4-H Learn and Earn for Fun and Profit Program, the first of its kind in Pennsylvania.

"Knowing they can operate a small business does wonders for young people's self-esteem and gives them fresh ideas for finding jobs," says Laurie Sicko-Sandow,

4-H coordinator in Chester County. "This is especially important for youths in low-income, high-unemployment areas."

Since the program began in 1990, young people in 10 counties have tried many different business ventures, including selling container gardens, fishing lures and hoagies. In some cases, the young entrepreneurs allot a portion of their profits to club funds for trips and special occasions.

To find out more about Learn and Earn for Fun and Profit, contact your nearest Penn State Cooperative Extension office, or contact Alan Snider, The Penn State 4-H Office, 417 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-2695.

Pennsylvania 4-H week takes place March 16 to 21 this year, celebrating nearly 80 years of programs that aid and educate youths. More than 150,000 young people in the state are involved in 4-H programs.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

'Sisterly Caring' Shown By Cumberland Farm Women

LOU ANN GOOD

Lancaster Farming Staff
BOILING SPRINGS (Cumberland Co.) — Cumberland County Farm Women president Fran Westbrook has nothing but praise for members of her society. "We are like sisters. When one has a problem we all share in it," she said.

Recently, Fran recalled two times when she desperately needed the support of the members. The first time was when she was a young mother with four children. When the oldest was only 15 months old, she had twins. Then her youngest daughter was born with a dislocated hip. The daughter was hospitalized for several years at the Elizabethtown Children's Hospital. It required many trips between the Westbrook's Cumberland County farm to the Lancaster County Hospital.

After that daughter and the other children became adults, Fran again needed the support of Farm Women members when one of her grandsons was born prematurely and permanently blind eight years ago.

Now that the initial shock of facing this disappointing news has faded, Fran credits this grandson for helping her find her place in life — that as a member of a parent support group for the blind and hearing impaired.

The joy that this happy, well-adjusted child brings into life infuses Fran. Remembering the support she received from Farm Women members while she grappled with the adjustment brings nothing but praise from Fran's lips.

She said, "Farm Women members are just like having extra sisters to help you cope."

Fran's involvement with the organization began early. Her mother, Pauline Kreitzer, was Cumberland County president at one time and organized a new group. Because her mother was deeply involved and happy with Farm Women, Fran said, "My mother was thrilled to death when I was installed as county president on November 9. She was too ill to attend the installation, but I think that was the one thing that caused her to hang onto life as long as she did."

Fran's mother died on November 21.

Fran heads 22 societies with its 356 members in Cumberland County. She has helped organize a younger group composed of daughters of Farm Women. Her daughter-in-law, Kathy Westbrook, is president of Group 22.

"It's a problem getting younger ones to join," Fran said, "but unlike many other organizations that have each family member pursuing their own interests, Farm Women encourage family activities by sponsoring family picnics and Christmas gatherings. And, they are always helping families in need. Recently, the Cumberland County societies donated funds to a young man from Shippensburg facing a heart transplant. The societies also help support foster parenting for delinquent teens."

Fran said that she is one of three sisters who grew up on a farm. "We did all the farm work just like the boys would have done if there had been any," she said. "We did the milking and the field work."

After her marriage, she and her husband Galen farmed 300 acres

for 13 years until her husband began a water drilling business. They purchased a 70-acre farm that they continue to live on and cash rent the fields.

The Westbrooks' children are now married and they have seven grandchildren. Two sons own and operate an excavating business on the family farm. A son-in-law works in her husband's well drilling business.

During her children's childhood, Fran said that she was active in everything that her children were involved in.

"I spent more time at school than home," she said. "I'm happy to have raised the children on the farm. There are so many benefits: such as responsibility and opportunities that come with farm life."

Fran believes it is important for mothers to be home with their children. "After they had grown and were away from home, they often remarked how nice it had been to come and have baking smells in the house and have me home," Fran said.

Her children have also made being an at-home mom a priority. When one of her daughters who was about to have a baby asked Fran, "Mom, what do you think I should do? We really need the money from my job."

Fran answered, "It depends on your priorities. If you feel you need new clothes and furniture, then keep your job. But if you believe it is more important to be with your children because you can never regain that time, stay home."

Fran said that her daughter chose to quit her job. "It was tough financially for them at first, but in the long run it's been a big benefit," Fran said.

She is grateful that her children and spouses are "wonderful mothers and fathers. We don't have any family problems that so many other families have today. I have a fantastic husband and we have been married 37 years," Fran said.

Those physical handicaps that her daughter and grandchild face have brought rewards. Fran said, "Our children benefitted because they knew what it was like to be handicapped. They always stuck up for the underdog. They learned to do that because of their sister when so many other children were cruel. Even though her leg was a problem, the experience taught and instilled values in our family."

Shortly after the birth of her blind grandson, Fran, as dairy princess chaperone, accompanied the Cumberland County dairy princess to a local school. Unknown to Fran beforehand, the presentation was to a class that was visually and hearing impaired. "It was very emotionally healing and fulfilling to see how the children were coping," she said. "It gave me hope."

Her grandson, who is now 8, attends the school where Fran had accompanied the dairy princess.

"We are so devoted to him. He takes piano lessons and we've attended several recitals. We are so proud of him," she said.

During Fran's tenure as county president, she hopes to incorporate fundraising for blind. That's my special interest," Fran said.

Fran does the bookwork for her husband. She is extremely proud of her youngest daughter who was out of school for five years before she decided to go to college. She is now a certified public accountant. I think the determination she developed because she was handicapped helped her earn her CPA within a short period of time," Fran said.

In her spare time, Fran bowls and golfs. She participates in a water exercise club three times weekly. And, she finds her Farm Women activities fulfilling.

"I just can't imagine what it would be like without Farm Women. We have so much joy helping others," she said.

Those who would like to know more about the Cumberland Farm Women societies, may call (717) 258-6403.

Here is Fran's husband's favorite chocolate cake recipe that has been handed down through the family. It is a moist cake that tastes best with peanut butter icing.

FISHERVILLE CHOCOLATE CAKE

4 squares unsweetened baking chocolate

1 stick margarine

1 cup boiling water

Melt chocolate and butter in boiling water.

2 teaspoons baking soda

2 cups flour

2 cups sugar

Mix together in liquid. Add 1/4 cup sour milk, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Blend and bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

Cool. Frost with a basic peanut butter icing that may be made by adding peanut butter to taste to vanilla icing.

PFU Opposes H.B. 496

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farmers Union (PFU) submitted testimony to the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee opposing House Bill 496, also known as the Nutrient Management Act.

Allen Deiter, immediate past president of PFU, expressed the concerns of the union at a hearing held recently in Bloomsburg.

Deiter listed the PFU's concerns as follows:

- The study should target areas of known or suspected problems and a statewide study would not be prudent use of state funds.

- PFU is concerned about regulating the time and manner in which manure is spread. Agriculture's varying enterprises and Pennsylvania's diverse topography and weather conditions could produce nightmares.

- House Bill 496 does not consider the impact on the economic state of family farmers.

- Proposed legislation addresses density criteria but mandates all agriculture operations to develop and implement a plan. It seems foolish to develop a plan if a farmer has 10 cows on 100 acres.

This is a waste of time and financial resources, according to PFU.

- Fees. Another cost to the farmer with no regard for his income, said PFU.

- Establishment of advisory board. As presently outlined, we have the probability of two farmers on a nine-member board that will promulgate and implement regulations that could be a financial and operational millstone according to PFU. This is not tolerable. Farmers should have an equitable input on the implementation of agriculture programs.

Deiter also said, "The proposed legislation has some merit in advocating the study of some of the other probable causes of stream pollution. We believe agriculture has too long been a whipping boy for the problem at hand."

"There is, I believe, one other major problem that is not being addressed. Reports that I have seen indicate many of our towns and cities have the storm drains leading to the sewer drains," he said.

In times of heavy rainfall, the sewer plants cannot handle the extra inflow and everything goes straight through to the stream," said Deiter. "It would cost some towns millions to correct the problem, so I suppose it is easier to blame a farmer. I have been told when it goes through the sewage plant in times of heavy runoff it is diluted. My answer is, so is the runoff from the manure the farmer spreads on his fields."

GAY N. BROWNLEE

Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Christopher Reichard, Chambersburg, the state FFA treasurer, was guest speaker at the Berlin-Borthersvalley FFA annual banquet. He noted in his remarks that Pennsylvania governor Robert P. Casey proclaimed the State FFA Week in conjunction with National FFA Week.

"We're very proud as a state association to have this honor bestowed upon us," he said.

Using apples to illustrate his message about FFA members, Reichard said, "Most people know what the rotten apple is, except that in this chapter, I don't think there are any."

Like the apple, FFA members have roots, trunk, and branches by which they are nourished, Reichard said, comparing those components to family, school leaders, and community organizations.

He said there are green apples, good polished apples, and rotten apples. The green apples are the FFA Greenhands, while the good polished apples are those members who have learned well under the leadership of persons such as Doyle Paul and Bonnie Murphy of the local chapter.

"FFA gets its reputation from apples it produces," said Reichard. "Each member has to decide what kind of apple he's going to be."

The 186 banquet guests were also entertained by the state demonstration team, who whipped up homemade ice cream. The gold medal winning team consisted of Bill Hersch, Steve Landis, and Eric Landis.

Calling their demonstration "a treat for all ages," the team explained each ingredient and piece of equipment they used. They also listed alternative methods of making homemade ice cream. (Their ice cream was made in a hand-cranked freezer.)

State FFA gold medal winners were Jacob Baughman, Jr. public speaking; Steve Landis, conservation public speaking; Matthew Welch, FFA public speaking; Matthew Johnson, livestock judging; James Burkholder, state ag record book; and Steve Landis, state ag record book (two categories).

State silver medals went to Jeremy Hay for livestock judging; Jason Baughman, dairy cow record book contest; and William hersch, on-farm work experience.

State bronze medals went to Matthew Foor for livestock judging; Daniel Delancy, on-farm work experience; and Matthew Johnston, swine breeding.

Hoffman's Nursery received a state FFA Citation Award.

Keystone Farmer winners were James Burkholder, Daniel Delancy, William Hersch, and Steve Landis. American Farmer pins were given to Keith Leydig, Philip Martz, Corey Will.

Chapter Farmers were Jason Baughman, Doug Bell, Barry Benning, Kenreth Benning, Lonnie Coughenour, Allen Durst, Michael Griffith, Chad Hyatt, Eric Landis, Bryan Sarver, Jonathan Smiley, and Chad Webreck.

Chapter scholarship pins and certificates went to Jason Baughman, James Burkholder, Jeremy Coughenour, William Hersch, Steve Landis, Jonathan Smiley, and Matthew Welch.

Bull Test Under Way

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, March 7, 1992-B17

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's official bull performance testing program is well under way.

Fifty-two of the state's most progressive purebred breeders have consigned 73 of their best purebred bulls of various breeds to the testing program at the Meat Animal Evaluation Center. This year there are 27 Angus, 19 Polled Herefords, 18 Simmentals, five Charolais, two Chiangus, two Limousin, and one Salers.

Upon completion of the 112-day testing period, the bulls are subjected to evaluation including a comprehensive breeding soundness exam, measurement of fat thickness and loin-eye area, and a health exam which includes blood and TB testing, enabling the bulls to be sold anywhere in the country. The bulls must also meet minimum requirements for structural correctness and breed character. Individual feed efficiencies will be calculated for the bulls.

After all of the indexes are calculated and the evaluations analyzed, approximately the top 75 percent of the bulls are selected to be sold at Pennsylvania's 19th Annual Performance Tested Bull

Sale scheduled for noon, March 27, at Penn State's Ag Arena. The bull sale again is one of the major components of the third Annual Pennsylvania Beef Expo, which is scheduled for March 26-29. The Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Association has their state female sale planned for immediately following the bull sale Friday afternoon.

The Pennsylvania Angus, Simmental, Salers and Charolais associations will be conducting their respective state breed female sales on Saturday, March 28.

The Expo schedule for Thursday includes an educational program which will cover the topic, "Improving Health in the Cattle Herd," and the trade show opening. The trade show will provide door prizes and activities as well as an opportunity to preview what is available in the animal health, nutrition, and equipment areas as well as many other associated products.

Other Expo events include animal exhibits featuring superior cows and bulls and a number of activities for the Junior Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association including a junior heifer show on Saturday evening and a junior steer show on Sunday, March 29.

For further information on the Performance Tested Bull Sale or the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, or to request a bull sale or breed female catalogs, contact Glenn Eberly, director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527 or (814) 865-5857.

tests were Bob Bittner, Steve Landis, Daniel Delancy, and Jason Baughman.

The one-acre corn growing contest gold medal winners were Michael Cooney and William Hersch for more than 125 bushels. Winning silver for under 125 to 100 bushels were Matthew Johnston and Daniel Delancy.

Cooney, 18, is enrolled in World Agriscience studies in Wald, Germany. His mother, Connie Cooney, accepted his award from William J. (Dub) Brant of the Pioneer Seed Co.

Daniel Delancy sold 334 bushels of fruit for the chapter and received a gift from Diversified Marketing Association.

The banquet saw FFA member representation from every chapter in Somerset County.

Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Robert Junk said, "PFU does not oppose the concept of nutrient management. Farmers need to do their share to preserve the environment, but when we start passing laws on how and when he can apply nutrients to his fields, we must consider the effect on his income."

DPI Fund Drive Under Way

GEORGETOWN, Del. — The 1992 Fund Drive for Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI) is under way and hundreds of volunteers are working to reach the $460,000 goal.

As the recent fund drive kick-off dinner in Seaford, Del., DPI First Vice President and Fund Drive Chairman Larry K. Winslow announced that cash and pledges received for 1992 totaled $229,241, half of the goal. With nine weeks remaining until the end of the campaign, Winslow encouraged the nearly 200 solicitors to work hard.

"There are many opportunities this year," Winslow said, "and we have a good story to tell about the poultry industry."

DPI membership includes poultry growers, businesses on Delmarva which recognize the importance of the local poultry industry to their operations and to the entire peninsula economy, allied industry suppliers of products and services, poultry company employees, and the eight local poultry companies.

The featured speaker at the kickoff dinner was David Carter, executive director of the Alabama Poultry and Egg Association. Mixing comedy with a serious message, Carter stressed the importance of teamwork in an association such as DPI. He said motivation and stimulation are necessary to reach the $460,000 goal.

DPI's Fund Drive continues until the April 21, 1992 Delmarva Poultry Booster Banquet in Salisbury, Md. To be listed in the banquet program, however, investments must be received by March 17. Close to 2,500 poultry industry personnel are expected to attend, making this event the largest poultry gathering in the northeast part of America. DPI supporters receive one ticket to the banquet for each $125 investment.

4-H Reaches Disadvantage Youths

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Disadvantaged youths and families in Chester County now can participate in trips to parks and camps. They also can be involved in recycling projects and other 4-H activities, as part of the federally funded Youth Educational Programs-Chester County (YEPCC).

YEPCC is supported by Penn State Cooperative Extension, the U.S. Department of Agriculture Extension Services and the W. K. Kellogg Foundation. The program offers in-school learning experiences, evening and weekend activities and community projects.

"We're working to strengthen ties among youths, their families and the community," says Laurie Sicko-Sandow, 4-H coordinator in Chester County. "Since it began in March, more than 500 youths aged 5 to 15, in Coatesville, South Coatesville, and Modena have participated."

Some program participants explored six acres of woods and meadows at the Glenmoore Uptunas Educational Resource Center this past summer. "They saw wildlife and learned how to identify animal tracks. They also learned basic first aid and how to build an emergency shelter," says Sicko-Sandow. "They developed persistence, resourcefulness and an increased respect for nature."

Other participants enhanced their economic skills and future employability through 4-H Learn and Earn for Fun and Profits activities. They got involved in their own enterprises, learning public-speaking skills by taking part in meetings of the local business community.

"Knowing that they can participate in or run a small business does wonders for young people's self-esteem and shows them alternatives for finding jobs," says Sicko-Sandow. "This is especially important since most of these youths come from low-income, high-unemployment areas."

The Chester County program is designed for a wide variety of interests and needs. Other components cover Black history and culture, basic nutrition, dangers of drug and alcohol abuse, community cleanup, skills necessary for staying home alone and plant and animal care.

"There are no limits to the program," says Sicko-Sandow. "We're enlisting the support of local communities, public agencies, the private sector and volunteers to work with cooperative extension."

YEPCC is one of 69 similar youth-education projects nationwide and one of 30 that are funded specifically to promote collaboration among local, county, state and national youth-serving organizations and cooperative extension. During the 1992-93 year, YEPCC will offer programs in Kennett Square as well as the Chester area.

For more information about 4-H programs in your area, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Spring is almost here and I'm not sure that I am ready. My braided rug is finished but not all of the past summer's snapshots have been put in a book.

There will be so many things to transplant from my previous garden on the farm to our new one. My husband says that he will help with the vegetable garden this summer. He has planted some small trees on the crown of the hill behind our house. They include several oak, maple, spruce, dogwood, and pine. A friend gave us persimmon trees but they had very few roots and might not grow.

Last Sunday my husband persuaded me to go along to Cowans Gap State Park. He has been reading and feels it would be a good place to fish for trout. But, I think that it was a long truck ride to get there. We saw well-kept houses and some whose yards were littered with junk. It would seem almost impossible to clean and put them in order. We were surprised to see the lake almost covered with ice. We did not get to do any fishing but the weather was nice and many folks were walking in the park.

Our children in Georgia tell us that their tulips and daffodils have been blooming for weeks. Their peas are several inches high as they were planted long ago.

The 90 bulbs that I planted in November are coming up but I don't know what to expect in the way of blooms. So for the present, I'll just enjoy my house plants. The impatiens have pink flowers, the begonias red ones and the blue flowers on a plant called "blue daze" are quite pretty plus the orange blossoms on the kalanchoes.

"The best fertilizer for a piece of land is the footprints of its owner."

PDPP Distributes $29,000 For Dairy Promotion

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program recently paid out nearly $29,000 in local funding promotion dollars to 34 county promotion committees across Pennsylvania. The funds were provided for the January to June 1992 funding period and included promotions for June Dairy Month, CHEERS at proms, radio advertising, and school promotions.

"We heartily support the efforts of county promoters throughout Pennsylvania," said Brian Ross, program manager, in announcing the awards. These volunteers work many hours to reach thousands of Pennsylvania consumers."

Pa. Dairy Princess Alternate Believes Everyone Can Be A Winner

LOU ANN GOOD

OTTSTVILLE (BUCKS CO.) —

Four years ago, when Tanya Martin was McKean County Dairy Princess, she ran for the state title. Because she did not win the state crown, some might say that she lost. Tanya disagrees.

"Any girl is a winner who has the opportunity to promote milk and dairy products," she said.

Tanya enjoyed promoting dairy products in McKean County so much that when she moved to Bucks County to attend college, she decided to try for a chance to promote dairy products again. Not only was she crowned Bucks-Montgomery County Dairy Princess but also the 1991-92 Pennsylvania First Alternate Dairy Princess.

Although pleased to represent the state, Tanya said, "I did not enter because I wanted the state title. I just wanted to promote dairy products. It's as much fun to be a county princess as it is to represent the state."

Tanya is often asked if she recommends that contestants try again. "I always tell them, 'definitely yes,' but not necessarily to win the state title. It's more important to concentrate on doing your best. It's an honor to promote the dairy industry and you don't need a crown to do it."

Dairying has never lost its appeal for this raven-haired college coed. When she moved from her home farm in McKean County for college, Tanya sought a job on a dairy farm. She now lives and works on Holly Hill Farm, an Ottsville farm owned by Walter Wurster, Chester County dairy agent. Her daily day includes feeding the 60 cows and 60 replacements while majoring in dairy science at Delaware Valley College. This is her second year in college and as a farmhand. On weekends, she feeds three times daily and helps with the milking as needed. She works full time for the farm during the summer.

"The farm is about the same size herd and the same setup as at home," Tanya said.

Home for Tanya is in Walnutport where two sisters, a brother, and her mother Starr operate the dairy farm.

"I wouldn't trade growing up on a dairy farm for anything else," Tanya said. "I learned responsibility and self discipline that I have applied to so many areas of my life."

Those values have been needed as Tanya has balanced college, work, and promotional responsibilities. Actually Tanya finds college life more adaptable to dairy princess responsibilities than when in high school. "In high school, I missed 36 days of school for dairy promotion. I could never miss that much college," Tanya said. But college classes are crammed into three days and Tanya schedules dairy promotions for the days she doesn't have classes.

Tanya has two alternates to help with county promotions. Most of her state appearances take her to Harrisburg and Philadelphia. She most enjoyed the All-American and Pennsylvania Farm Show. "I enjoyed being around so many animals with such great quality and genetic background. It was overwhelming," she said.

Although Tanya has not shown at the state Farm Show and the All-American, she is no stranger to showing and judging since she was an eight-year member of a 4-H dairy club.

Tanya graduated as valedictorian from Port Allegany High School where she was secretary of the National Honor Society and a class officer. She was a member of chorus, SADD, and a group training mentally retarded students. She was president of both the 4-H dairy club and livestock club and accepted for the Pennsylvania Governor's School in Agriculture.

Now a college sophomore, Tanya likes the small classes at Delaware Valley College where there are only eight dairy science majors in the sophomore class.

"I have a marketing class this semester. That gives me the theory end that coincides with the promotional end," she said.

She finds it interesting to observe shoppers during promotions. "They fall into two groups," she said. "Brand loyalty where they stick to the same brand no matter what, and those who buy whatever is cheapest brand."

The marketing class and the promotional experience have enabled Tanya to see how products need to be marketed to target the two different groups of customers.

Tanya's promotional efforts are not limited to adults. She considers her elementary school appearances as one of the most effective promotional endeavors. "They are tomorrow's consumers and we must teach them the value of real dairy products so they continue to buy them," she said. One of the main points that Tanya makes when telling children about dairy products is to emphasize where milk comes from. "Children generally think milk comes from the store," Tanya said. "They should know the whole milk story so they comprehend the value of farms."

"My reign as dairy princess has changed my whole career outlook," Tanya said. Originally, she planned to return to the family farm, but now hopes to work in milk promotion full time.

Tanya enjoys sharing her favorite recipes using dairy products with others. "Consumers don't want complicated recipes or those with unusual ingredients," she said. "These are some simple and delicious recipes they will enjoy."

CHOCOLATE CHIP CUPCAKES

1½ cups flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup cocoa
1 cup water
½ cup oil
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Filling:

8-ounces cream cheese
1 egg
½ cup sugar
1 cup chocolate chips
Pinch salt

Beat cream cheese, egg, sugar, chocolate chips, and salt until smooth. Combine dry ingredients. Stir in liquid ingredients until mixture is smooth. Fill paper-line cupcake tins half full. Then put 1 heaping teaspoon of the filling mixture into center of each cupcake. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes.

CHUNKY CHEESE SOUP

½ cup water
1 cup carrots, sliced
1 cup chopped celery
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups diced potatoes
2 cups creamed corn
1½ cups milk
¾ cup cheddar cheese, cubed

Cook water, carrots, celery, salt, and pepper. Add potatoes. Cook about 10 minutes. Stir in corn and cook 10 minutes longer or until potatoes are soft. Add milk and cheese. Heat until cheese has melted.

"Consumers don't want complicated recipes or those with unusual ingredients," Pa. Alternate Dairy Princess Tanya Martin says. Here she shows some of her favorite foods using dairy products.

2 8-ounce packages cream cheese

1 cup sugar
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat well. Pour into pie pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. When cool, spread 1 can of your favorite pie filling on top.

BERRY WOBBLE

¾ cup milk
4-ounces frozen sliced strawberries, slightly thawed
2 ice cubes

Combine in blender until frothy. Pour into a tall glass and serve.

Bucks-Montgomery Seeks Dairy Princess Candidates

DOYLESTOWN, Bucks Co.) — The Bucks County 4-H Dairy Club is looking for new members. Any child between the ages of 9 and 19 is eligible to join 4-H.

Currently there are more than 20 members.

A 4-H dairy project involves taking care of a calf or heifer, keeping records on feed, vet costs, breeding, etc., learning many things about the dairy industry, as well as learning to show dairy cattle. We have a dedicated group of volunteer leaders who are very enthusiastic and very helpful.

Dairy club members do not need to live on a dairy farm. The only requirement is a genuine interest in dairy.

The first meeting of the year will be on March 9, 7:30 p.m., at Neshaminy Manor Center.

If you have any children, nephews, nieces, or neighbors who might be interested, we would love to have them come to the meeting and learn more about 4-H Dairy projects.

For more information, call Michael P. Fournier, county agent, or Annette Canalicchio, 340-9781; Buddy Buckman, 795-2178; David Crooke, 598-7348; Steve Worthington, 249-3220; or Harold Haldeman, 348-5648.

Tanya balances college, dairy farm, and dairy princess responsibilities. Here she feeds the 60-head of cows that are milked three times daily.

Lanc. Co. Farm Women will host the State Spring Rally on May 27th at the Sheraton.

The March meeting of #15 will be held on the 19th at the home of Trudy Bard, Kirkwood, with program on "Restorations."

Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, sponsored the lunch to show health and nutrition leaders that the beef industry is committed to providing low-fat beef products to adults and children.

The low-fat ground beef provided at the conference uses oat bran and oat fiber and is one of the formulas selected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for distribution in the National School Lunch program. Between 1987 and 1988, the beef industry, through the Beef Industry Council and the Beef Board, invested more than $373,000 of producer check-off dollars in the development of low-fat ground beef technology.

"Low fat ground beef reflects the industry's commitment to providing beef that fits into a balanced, varied and healthy diet," Dr. Scott Barao, University of Maryland, told the conference attendees. "This product is especially exciting in terms of its appeal to children and its potential role in low-fat school lunch meals."

He added that U.S. beef producers are committed to producing a diversity of wholesome, lean and nutritious beef products for all consumers. These same producers, he said, are investing millions of their own dollars in research to accomplish this.

Teen Volunteerism On The Rise

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A recent Gallup Poll blasts the notion that teenagers spend hours after school yakking on the phone or blaring the stereo. In reality, many devote several hours a week to church, school or community service.

"This survey showed teens volunteering at the same rate as adults or higher," says Dr. Robert Lewis, professor of 4-H youth in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "In 1989, 58 percent of American teens volunteered, compared with 54 percent of adults."

Teens reported getting involved in areas of art, culture, and humanities (78 percent), education (74 percent), human services (55 percent) and environmental causes (52 percent).

While parents unconsciously may influence students to volunteer, the 14- to 17-year-olds who responded to the survey said the stimulus came from extracurricular activities (79 percent), schools (52 percent) and churches (50 percent).

Among the most important of these extracurricular activities is 4-H, says Lewis. "The 4-H program in Pennsylvania and across the nation encourages young people to be leaders in their communities," he says.

"In 4-H, we recognize that teens have a great capacity for learning," he says. "They respond quickly to new ideas and opportunities for service. Teens also want a role in solving social, economic and political problems. They need a creative outlet for their energy." Through 4-H leadership programs, teens learn about planning and conducting programs and communicating effectively with a variety of audiences. At annual retreats and events such as Capital Days, they learn about citizenship and working within the political system to make a difference.

As a result of 4-H leadership development, many teens become involved in outreach programs for troubled youths, neighborhood crime watch programs, and community health care and beautification programs.

"In 4-H, we even see kids inspiring their parents to become involved and serve as volunteer leaders," Lewis says.

According to another Gallup Poll, adult volunteerism increased almost 10 percent from 1988 to 1990. Many credit President Bush's "Thousand Points of Light" message as inspiration. Others say budget cuts for social programs have prompted concerned individuals to devote their time and attention towards solving problems such as child abuse, homelessness and alcoholism.

Whatever the reason, volunteerism has positive effects all around. "Volunteers increase their self-esteem, discover new talents and develop leadership skills," says Lewis.

"Young people who volunteer can increase their chances of finding profitable employment. Volunteerism also can open career doors for adults. For older adults, volunteerism offers the opportunity to remain active and continue making a contribution to society."

Workshop Planned For Ag Literacy

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living is inviting kindergarten through fifth grade teachers to attend the first "Better Living Through Agriculture in the Classroom Workshop," July 20-23, at the Pennsylvania State University.

This fun-filled, hands-on workshop will focus on the holistic educational approach, enabling elementary teachers to develop projects and lessons that integrate agricultural concepts into their existing curriculum, according to Beth Heald Moore, executive director of the Foundation. Arrangements are being made for optional university or certification credit that can be applied for through Penn State for local Intermediate Units.

Teachers will be responsible for a $10 registration fee and a commitment to share materials and ideas with other local teachers. Additional costs for conference planning, materials, meals and lodging will be paid by the Foundation through a $500 "Sponsor Your Favorite Teacher Program" supported by Pennsylvania businesses and agricultural organizations.

"We are currently working with several agricultural organizations to establish the sponsorship program and are seeking additional donations to help cover the cost of meals and special events during the workshop," Moore said.

Participation in the workshop is limited; applications will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis. Interested teachers can request a registration form, and businesses can learn more about the sponsorship program by contacting Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living, Beth Heald Moore, executive director, 5399 Guiter Road, Chambersburg, PA 17201; (717) 375-2639.

National Ag Week Scheduled

What is National Agriculture Day/Week? National Agriculture Day/Week provides special recognition of the food and fiber industry's contributions to America. Through it, the food and agricultural community works to increase the awareness of the industry's accomplishments and the challenges it faces in continuing to meet the world's food and fiber needs. This special tribute promotes unity in the food and agricultural community. It also serves to educate the non-farm public about the industry.

The Agriculture Council of America (ACA) is privileged to serve as coordinator for National Agriculture Day, but the program itself belongs to the countless number of individuals, companies and organizations throughout the country that participate in this annual observance.

2. National Agriculture Day/Week has ambitious goals. How can you help to achieve them with a one-day/one-week observance? The answer is we don't. National Agriculture Day/Week is the means through which the industry stimulates a series of activities and involvement that can continue throughout the year. As a result, Agriculture Day/Week is only a focal point because public education is a year round activity.

3. Who founded National Agriculture Day? Many people were involved, but the primary groups were the American National Cattlemen and the National Agri-Marketing Association. The two groups planned the first National Agriculture Day in 1973.

4. Why is it important that agriculture reach out to its customers, the consuming public? Many consumers hold a simple view of America's food and agriculture system: a barn and a silo, some seeds and a plow. But the industry is enormously varied and increasingly complex.

While some in the industry produce crops and raise livestock, others market, process, deliver and sell food and other products. The American food and agriculture industry essentially provides the food, fabric, forests and other products consumers use every day. Yet few consumers are fully aware of the benefits the industry provides.

The industry must help the public understand the important stake they have in the future of America's food and agriculture industry. In addition, it must help them become better aware of how closely tied consumers are to the industry.

For example, the food and fiber industry represents nearly 16 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP) and an estimated 21 million jobs. That's about 17 percent of the total national work force. Yet, of those jobs, approximately 90 percent are off the farm. That means you don't have to live on a farm to have your livelihood depend on agriculture.

5. As coordinator for National Agriculture Day, what does ACA do? Several things. ACA's major role is to stimulate activity at both the national and local level. It does this in several ways: a) providing materials that companies and organizations can use in their individual Ag Day activities; b) offering ideas that other groups can implement; c) serving as a clearinghouse for information and ideas; d) working to pass the Ag Day legislation calling on the President to proclaim the observance; e) coordinating the Capitol Hill reception for urban and rural members of Congress.

6. What is the Agriculture Council of America? ACA is a broad-based membership organization through which food and fiber related interests work together to promote and build public support for decisions that ensure a healthy agriculture. ACA serves as the vehicle through which an industry as diverse as agriculture can work together.

7. When was ACA founded?

ACA was formed in 1973 in a merger of the National Educational Institute for Agriculture and the National Agricultural Communications Board. It was formed as a communications arm for agriculture.

8. Who is involved in ACA? ACA's supporters represent every segment of agriculture: individual farmers and ranchers, local farm businesses, local, state and national farm and commodity organizations, regional cooperatives and national companies that supply America's farmers and ranchers with the goods and services they need.

4-H Integrates Other Cultures

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Anyone working with young people can benefit from attending a free workshop in March on "Global Connections: A Development Education Project."

The workshop, coordinated by 4-H through Penn State Cooperative Extension and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is part of a statewide effort to help youth leaders and educators incorporate international understanding into their curricula.

"The workshop will provide youth educators and leaders with many ideas for giving young people an international perspective on economic, social and cultural development. 4-H agents, teachers, scout leaders, youth program organizers, church educators and others will be able to use the information."

Topics will include an introduction to the 4-H and "My World" leader guides; teaching global citizenship during camping, recreation, exhibits, fairs and festivals; using games that simulate real-life situations to teach about other countries; teaching global marketing of agricultural products; and planning community service projects with young people. Participants will receive a packet of guides and ideas.

"Global Connections: A Development Education Project" will be offered at State College on March 20, in Butler on March 23, and in Wilkes-Barre on March 25. Registration will be at 9:00 a.m., and the first session will start at 9:20 a.m. Attendance is free, and lunch will be provided for those who register by March 10.

Parents & 4-H And Youth Development

Parents play an important role in the non-formal educational experience that is the community or project 4-H club. They are instrumental in moving their children into the program. Parents are in fact the reason given by youth when asked why they became involved in 4-H.

Parents form the core of volunteer leaders that make clubs the viable delivery method they are. However, increasing numbers of youth are being reached through school enrichment and other intact groups such as school-age childcare programs. Parents can have a role here too.

Devising ways to involve parents in the 4-H youth development experience their children are having presents a challenge but it can be accomplished. It can begin with informing parents that their children are (or will be) participating in 4-H youth development curriculum in their classroom, childcare program, or other setting. The letter to 4-H families (S8003) or an adaption of it can be used for this purpose.

Parents do want to know about their children's experience. Schools that have 4-H programs can be encouraged to include 4-H exhibits during parent nights or open house type functions. In their case parents will not only learn the child is having a 4-H youth development experience but will see and learn just what this experience is.

Parents can also be involved in the child's experience. Self care programs using the 4-H materials "On My Own and OK" in schools, day camps, and childcare facilities can provide the program as a joint child/parent experience. In some cases a natural progression would consist of parent involvement in their child's experience then moving on to a program of their own such as parent education. Total family involvement is a tried and true extension concept. 4-H youth development programming can do much to accomplish such a goal.

Veal Calves Treated Well Despite Image

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Despite negative images of veal production published by animal activists, most veal calves are healthy and well-treated, according to a Penn State researcher.

"Veal production is the most misunderstood and widely criticized agricultural production method," said Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science. "Our research on more than 1,000 calves over the past two years has shown that growth rates, the condition of the organs, the color and the muscle tone all point to a well-cared for animal."

In a recent study of special-fed or "fancy" veal, where calves were kept on a liquid formula diet for 16 weeks before being marketed, Wilson found that less than 2 percent of the calves died before reaching market. He also found that the average growth rate for the calves ranged from 2.5 pounds to 3.1 pounds per day, depending on the farm where the animals were raised.

"An animal that grows this rapidly is physiologically and metabolically fit. Results from muscle color scores and other characteristics of both rapidly-growing calves and slow-growing calves indicate that faster-growing calves are not necessarily more stressed."

In addition, Wilson's findings debunk animal activists' claims that calves are often anemic because of the liquid diet they are fed.

"In truly anemic animals the first negative response is lack of growth. This certainly would not be a characteristic veal producers would encourage," Wilson said. "Our research has shown that a count of iron-containing hemoglobin in these calves had levels well above what is considered anemic."

A level of 7.0 grams of hemoglobin per deciliter of blood is considered borderline anemic. During the first 10-week period, the calves in Wilson's study had hemoglobin levels that averaged slightly above 9.2 grams per deciliter. Before being marketed, the average overall level of all the calves was 7.8 grams. The researcher added that when hemoglobin levels drop, producers add iron supplements to the calves' diets.

"These animals are not under nutritional stress, and they are not subject to physical stress from housing conditions."

One of the most controversial practices in veal production systems is the use of individual stalls where calves are tethered. Animal activists claim this practice severely limits calf movement and veal producers should move toward a group housing system.

Wilson explains that in research involving individual stalls versus group housing, individual stalls reduced the spread of disease, calves grew more uniformly, were cleaner and did not suckle or "chew" one another, and mortality rates were reduced.

In an effort to satisfy questions from animal activists, he has now embarked on a four-year project to determine the health, behavior, performance and effects of calves raised under three different management/nutritional systems. One system will involve the controversial individual stall method and the liquid diet. The second system is a combination of individual stalls and a mixed diet of milk replacer and grain.

The third method — range-raised calves — is a system often suggested by activists. Calves will be raised on marginal-producing dairy cows which act as "foster mothers," pasture and grain. The calves, weaned after four months, are then free to graze on high-quality, perennial grass pastures.

Wilson hopes the study will not only pinpoint the most effective and humane method for veal production, but also lead to the development of a standardized veal grading system.

According to the National Cattlemen's Association, more than 300 million pounds of veal were marketed in 1990. Compared to the beef market, which recorded 22.6 billion pounds, the veal market is a relatively small piece of the cattle industry, and few studies have been done comparing its production methods.

"Although the veal industry is small compared to the beef industry, it is important to many segments of the agricultural community. In fact, the nation's dairy farmers rely heavily on the veal industry to purchase and feed out surplus dairy calves."

The association estimates that in 1991, veal production figures will drop by 15 to 20 percent, mostly because of the expense of raising calves.

"Veal production costs are up, and consumption is dropping," Wilson said. "We're not sure what the cause of this trend is, but we realize that through research we can improve the systems currently in use and give people a choice on the type of veal they prefer to consume, based on the production method used."

FFA

Twin Valley FFA Wins Big

On February 14 through 16 many top-placing county record books were sent to the state contests. The books were divided into categories such as on-farm and off-farm work experience, rabbits, wildlife, and aquaculture.

Fifteen Twin Valley students had books entered, but 20 medals were awarded to them.

Andy Mast received a gold medal for field corn and grain, and Heather Dougherty for guinea pigs. Ryan Marshall received gold for two projects: beekeeping and non-farm work experience. A gold medal was also won by Ulyssia Drozd for goat breeding. Jason Hess received a gold medal for wildlife and was also named first place winner for the southeast region of the Game Commission.

There was also six silver medals won by Twin Valley students. Tracey Putt received one for her beef growing project, and Ray Reinhard for aquaculture. Andy Mast got a silver medal for his dairy herd project, and Brian McGowan for field corn. Ryan Marshall also received two medals in this category for swine finishing and poultry.

There was also many bronze medals awarded to our members. Ben Dodd for his Aquaculture, Brian McGowan for agricultural shop skills, Heather Dougherty for non-farm work experience, Marcie Baker for guinea pigs, and Michelle Powell for poultry. Jason Brooks received two bronze medals, one for home improvement and one for agricultural shop skills. Matt Scott also received a bronze medal and was named the third place winner in the Southeastern Pennsylvania Game Commission region.

Today's successful growers work harder than ever before — but they also work smarter. Alfalfa farmers across the country recognize that in tough times, they can't afford to gamble with anything less than W-L alfalfa seed to give them the high yields, quality forage and long stand life necessary for a profitable crop. They also know that W-L alfalfas are backed up by over 25 years of research, technical teams of experts and a reliable, service-oriented distribution system.

DAIRY HEIFERS
Luther B. Smith
Multicounty Farm
Management Agent

A common question that is asked by dairy farmers is should I raise my own replacements or pay someone else to do it for me?

The only way to accurately answer that question is to compare what it costs you to raise a heifer to calving vs. having to pay someone else to do it.

Don't only consider the direct (variable) costs but also keep in mind the fixed costs and the opportunity costs. Opportunity costs are what it costs someone to do one thing as opposed to another.

If you are considering having someone else raise your heifers on a contract basis, or you might be thinking of raising heifers for other farmers, the following example might be of some help.

The source of some of my information is the Penn State Farm Management Handbook, DHIA averages, and personal estimates.

The three farm situations are the same farm. If an item, such as total debt load, is not mentioned it was the same for all three situations.

The primary question to be addressed is "I need more cash flow. Should I expand the herd with or without heifers?" We focused on raising our own heifers vs. having someone else do it. So in our example, the heifers return to the farm they were born on and the original owner retains ownership.

Please keep in mind that the results are based on the given situation, and with certain factors, such as prices and yields, you might not get exactly the same results with differing factors.

Base Plan(Present Farm Situation)

75 tillable acres, 19 acres (135 bushels/acre) feed corn, 26 acres (20 tons/acre) corn silage, and 30 acres total hay (4.8 tons/acre, average for new seeding and established stand).

Farm produces 65 percent of the hay, 100 percent of the corn silage, and 39 percent of the corn grain needs.

60-cow herd, 60 heifers (all ages), 17,000 pounds milk/cow/year, $13.00/cwt. average annual gross milk price.

Approximately a 14-month calving interval with heifers calving at 28 months of age and weighing 1,100 pounds.

First calf heifers milk 80 percent of herd average (13,600 pounds) and represent 25 percent of the herd.

Second calf heifers milk 85 percent of herd average (14,400 pounds) and represent 25 percent of the herd.

Culling rate is 25 percent and mortality on heifers (birth to fresh) 5 percent.

Limiting factors are land and the size of the dairy barn. There is room for 10 more cows with some remodeling but that space is taken up at present by heifers.

Results From Base Plan Situation (Figures Annual Basis)

Purchased feed $17,490 (this includes heifers), purchased corn $11,170, purchased hay $6,750, milk income $120,998, net cash farm income $30,170, cash available after all expenses, taxes, family living, debt payments are paid = $1,936.

Alternative #1
Same Farm
With Changes

24 acres feed corn, 21 acres corn silage, 30 acres hay. Farm produces 100 percent of the hay, 100 percent of the corn silage, and 49 percent of the corn grain needs.

70-cow herd, no heifers raised on the farm, heifers return to the farm 2 months before calving, and this amounts to 17 springing heifers on the farm over a year's time. Same milk herd average and price.

Barn was remodeled to add the 10 cows at a cost of $500/head, totalling $5,000 financed for 2 years at 9 percent.

Heifers are contract raised at a cost of $1.48/heifer/day for 56 heifers per year.

Culling rate is 25 percent and mortality on heifers is less than 1 percent.

Heifers calve at 24 to 25 months of age and weigh 1,200 pounds. First calf heifers milk 85 percent of herd average (14,400 pounds) and represent 25 percent of the herd.

Second calf heifers milk 95 percent of herd average (16,200 pounds) and represent 25 percent of the herd.

Results From
Alternative #1,
Annual Basis

Purchased feed $13,504, purchased corn $9,224, purchased hay $0, milk income $147,186, heifer raising contract $30,252, net cash farm income $40,980, new debt payment $2,881, cash available after all expenses, taxes, family living, and debt payments = $7,305.

Alternative #2

Same situations as the base plan but the herd was expanded to 70 cows and the heifers were also expanded to 70 total. The dairy facilities were expanded as in alternative #1 and heifer facilities were built to accommodate 70 heifers at $500/heifer.

Total new debt is now $40,000 ($5,000 for 10 more cows and $35,000 for heifer facilities) financed for 7 years at 9 percent. The cropping program is now 15 acres of corn grain, 30 acres of corn silage, and 30 acres of hay. The farm produces 58 percent of the hay, 100 percent of the corn silage, and 26 percent of the corn grain needs.

Results From
Alternative #2,
Annual Basis

Purchased feed $20,405, purchased corn $15,675, purchased hay $10,250, milk income $141,550, net cash farm income $31,869, new debt payment $8,216, cash available after all expenses, taxes, family living, and debt payments = $608.

The purpose of this article is to demonstrate that contracting someone else to raise heifers might be a possible way to increase cash flow. I strongly suggest that before you decide to do something like this that you develop a long-range budget for your farm situation and determine all the positives and negatives.

The above results were generated by using the Finpack financial program. If you would like to discuss this or other farm-related financial situations, please call your county Penn State extension office and ask to talk to a farm management agent.

Penn Staters Win At NESA

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The weekend following Valentine's Day was destined to be very special for a select group of Penn State students.

For most of them, it wasn't a time to spend with loved ones as 32 students and two advisors representing the Dairy Science Club and Block and Bridle Club traveled to The University of Connecticut at Storrs for the Northeast Student Affiliate (NESA) of the American Dairy Science Association and the American Society of Animal Science.

Activities for the weekend included a judging contest, a demonstration by the University of Connecticut Morgan Horse Drill Team, oral paper presentations, a quiz bowl competition, awards banquet, business meeting, a dance and recognition of the outstanding senior.

Contestants in the judging contest were required to place a total of seven classes, including Holstein Aged Cows, Morgan Mares, Polled Hereford Yearling Heifers, Polled Dorset Fall Ewe Lambs, Yorkshire Gilts, Leghorn Laying Hens, and Lamb Carcasses.

The Penn State A Team comprised of Kelley Shearer, Beth Lair, Tom McCauley, and Tom Smallback placed second while the Penn State B Team comprised of Ruth Kulp, Bodie Knapp, Will Phipps, and George McQuiston finished seventh. As individuals in the judging contest, George McQuiston placed sixth and Tom Smallback scored 344 out of 350 possible points to finish as high individual overall.

In the oral paper presentations, Penn State students garnered first and second place overall. With his presentation entitled, "Genetic Engineering: For A New Agriculture," Matt Zerby finished just ahead of fellow Penn State student Miriam Kelly who spoke on, "Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy."

The quiz bowl competition was exciting as both Penn State teams had ample opportunity to excel. The Penn State A Team comprised of Karen Fessler, Chris Nolan, Jason Ahola, and Tom Wiker progressed undefeated through all of the brackets to win the competition. The Penn State B Team comprised of Meg Itle, Annette Lovell, Rob Davis and Andy Morley lost a very close tie-breaker match and finished fifth.

One of the added attractions included the UConn Ag Olympics, which included an egg toss contest, hay bale stack relay race, and a sack race relay. Club members were accompanied by Dale Olver and Keith Bryan, instructors in dairy and animal science and co-advisors to the Dairy Science Club and Block and Bridle Club, respectively.

The final two categories of competition at the 1992 NESA conference included recognition of the outstanding senior and the outstanding institution overall. Eight institutions had the opportunity to nominate one candidate for the outstanding senior competition. The prestigious award was garnered by Kelley Lyn Shearer, a dairy and animal science major at Penn State.

The Penn State A Team emerged in first place overall and the Penn State B Team finished in third place overall.

DEAD PIGS

Animal rights, manure odors, and lousy market prices have given pork producers their share of aggravation.

Now I'm about to suggest that another issue is waiting to erupt for every livestock producer.

Dead animals.

We generate a lot of them, and I suspect that sooner or later someone is going to figure that out. The first question will be, "What does the industry do with all of those carcasses?" Our answer, if we're honest, may not give us high marks.

How Many Dead Hogs Does Pennsylvania "Produce?"

I'm sure anyone knows for sure. But we can assume that from each litter of pigs, one will be born dead and another will die before weaning.

Before market, another half a pig will die. A rough estimate of these death losses would be about 40 pounds per litter. Sows will average about two litters per year, which makes the annual death losses about 80 pounds per sow. Multiply that times the 100,000 sows in Pennsylvania (as of December 1991) and we have a staggering pile of dead hogs.

How Are We

Supposed To Dispose?

According to Pennsylvania Act 317, passed in 1945, we have three options: burn, bury, or render.

Producers "... owning any animal that has died shall not allow the carcass to lie about his premises." (We're hardly ever guilty of that.) And, "... such carcasses shall be disposed of within 48 hours after death..."

This act provides no details on burning. However, the Department of Environmental Resources (DER) does have recommended criteria for emissions from "crematory incinerators."

If a producer chooses the burial route, the site must not be subject to overflow from ponds or streams, and must be at least "... 100 feet from any water course, well or spring, public highway, house or stable." In addition, the carcass must be covered with at least three inches of lime and two feet of soil.

Renderers must be licensed, and there are requirements listed for the how the renderer must operate.

How Do Producers Dispose Of Dead Pigs?

Here are my own observations, plus information from a highly unscientific survey that I conducted over the last few weeks.

Rendering. Most of the large operations choose this alternative. Environmentally, it's certainly a sound practice since the material is recycled and does not lead to ground water contamination or air pollution.

The cost for pickup of material continues to go up, however. Producers in the southeastern part of Pennsylvania pay from $7 to $12 per trip. Most large operations require twice-a-week pickup, which comes to an annual cost of $728-$1,248.

Biosecurity is a potential risk when sending dead animals to the renderer. You should assume that the rendering truck is loaded with any organism that's ever been invented. Use the same precautions at the time of dead animal pickup or drop off that you would in an auction barn.

Incineration. The most popular incinerators in this state appear to be those manufactured by R&K Incinerator, Inc. (Decatur, Ind.), and Shenandoah (Harrisonburg, Va.).

The Shenandoah unit comes with an LP gas, fuel oil, or natural gas burner. It's a top-loading device that is best suited for small animals. Large market hogs and sows would have to be disassembled before loading. All material is held by grate which is mounted above the burner. The sides of the unit are protected from heat damage with a concrete-like liner.

The R&K unit is a round, horizontal steel tank with a fuel oil burner at one end and a stack at the other. The six models range from a 100-pound to 600-pound capacity. The R&K incinerator has no grate, and since animals are loaded from the side, it's relatively easy to accommodate large market hogs and sows. Prices range from about $1,000-$2,000. Since the flame is above the dead pigs, all smoke and gases rising from the material are quickly oxidized.

Pennsylvania's DER requires that livestock incinerators meet guidelines for emissions, temperature, visible air contamination (smoke), and retention time (time from air intake to exhaust). According to the unit's specifications, all of these criteria are met except visible air contamination. The company literature does not provide any specifications for that criterion.

Although the R&K tank contains no heat-protecting liner, most producers get a useful life of five to seven years from these units. Some producers make minor welding repairs and are able to extend the life to 10 years or more.

The manufacturer recommends that the unit be run for two hours each day after material is added, for a total of 12-14 hours per week. However, most producers tend to burn only about six hours per week. The key is not to try to completely burn the material as soon as it's added. Intermittent burying will be just as effective, and it will also greatly extend the life of the tank.

If the largest unit (600-pound capacity, 2.75 gallons of fuel/hour) were used for 14 hours per week, it could easily handle a 300-sow farrow-to-finish operation. At $1/gal, the annual fuel cost would be about $2,000. Add to this a depreciation value of $400, and the total cost of dead pig disposal amounts to $2,400, which doesn't compare too favorably with the current costs of rendering.

Burial. Burial requires a little more work, but it's generally the most practical system for operations off the beaten path, and it's cheap.

The biggest concern I have with burial is way it's done. Many producers dig a trench, fill the trench with dead pigs, and cover as they go. If they cover with lime (most people don't) and two feet of soil, this method is technically legal. But in time, enough rotting flesh could accumulate that ground water could easily be contaminated, especially in areas of limestone, sink holes, shale, or sand.

Manure Spreader. Not legal, and not in the best interest of biosecurity.

Buzzards. Some operations have established a symbiotic relationship with the local buzzard population. Dead hogs are hauled up on the hillside, and the buzzards do their thing, sometimes, I am told, within a matter of hours. This is another routine that is not listed in the 1945 law.

Alligators. Popular in Florida. Ernie Nunez maintains more than 7,000 gators to clean up the dead from 2,000 sows and 200 cows.

What About Composting?

It's working for the poultry industry, and I think it has promise for the hog industry. Dead animals, straw, and manure are mixed together and Mother Nature does the rest.

If the pile is kept aerobic (at least 30 percent free air space) at the right moisture level (40-60 percent) and the correct pH (5-12), the organic material will decompose under temperatures of about 150 degrees F. That's enough to kill harmful microorganisms.

With a mowing height ranging from 2" to 14", it can also handle material up to two inches thick. With two self-leveling rods from front to rear, mowing height can easily be maintained, as well as deck-flexing being held to a minimum.

Program Provides Forest Management Help

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvanians now have an opportunity to contribute to the perpetual health and productivity of the state's 16 million acres of forestland through Pennsylvania's Forest Stewardship Program.

"Forest Stewardship is a relatively new program in Pennsylvania — less than a year old," said Dr. Stephen Jones, assistant professor of forest resources at Penn State and one of the program's educational directors. "But if people's response to the program approaches our expectations, it will have a highly positive impact on the future of the state's forests."

The Forest Stewardship Program provides educational, technical, and financial assistance to those who own or use the 12.5 million acres of privately held forestland throughout the state.

"Our theme, Forests for Life, is intended to make people aware of the many life-sustaining benefits that forestland provides and to show them how forests can be managed to preserve those benefits both for today and for future generations," Jones said.

By enlisting the expertise of natural resource managers from diverse backgrounds, the program can show landowners how to manage their forests for multiple uses while preserving the land's productivity. "Over the years — and sometimes through past mistakes — we've learned a great deal about using forests for multiple benefits without destroying the complex and delicate balance among the plants, animals and natural forces in a forest ecosystem," Jones said.

"A forestland owner can reap the economic benefits from timbering without sacrificing the forest's other benefits, such as air and water purification, soil conservation, wildlife habitat and recreational and aesthetic values."

Jones hopes the program will bring at least a million acres of private forestland under stewardship management by the mid-1990s. "We are making people aware of the program and spreading the message that forests can be managed wisely for diverse benefits," Jones said.

"Another program component gives forestland owners technical and financial assistance in designing and implementing sound forest management plans. The more people who get involved in the program, the better chance Pennsylvania has to leave a legacy of healthy, productive forests for future generations."

The Forest Stewardship Program is administered nationally by the USDA Forest Service. Pennsylvania's program is directed by the Department of Environmental Resources Bureau of Forestry with guidance from a statewide Forest Stewardship Steering Committee made up of representatives from cooperating public and private organizations throughout the state.

Penn State is developing the public awareness and educational aspects of the program.

Anyone who wants more information on Pennsylvania's Forest Stewardship Program can call a toll-free number, (800) 235-WISE, or write to Pennsylvania's Forest Stewardship Program, c/o Forest Resources Extension, The Pennsylvania State University, 110 Ferguson Building, University Parks PA 16802-4300.

Fish, Wildlife Seminar

FOREST HILL, MD. — The Harford County Office of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring a Fish and Wildlife Management Seminar at the Southhampton Middle School on Saturday, March 7.

Robert Halman, county extension director and chairman of the seminar organization committee, said "Wildlife management is particularly important in areas like Harford County where increasing urbanization has reduced availability of habitat but residents still consider wildlife an important part of environmental quality."

Registration begins at 8 a.m. A $5 fee covers program and literature expenses.

The morning program includes presentations on wildlife management and ecology, improvement of wildlife habitat, wildlife management incentive programs, and planning for wildlife management on farms.

Topics for the afternoon program include pond management, income opportunities and insurance considerations, managing streams for trout habitat, and management of deer and turkey, waterfowl, and upland game.

The seminar will close with a panel discussion and question and answer period.

"This program will provide interested landowners with the information needed to make decisions about planning, and implementing and financing a wildlife management program," said Halman. "We encourage interested farmers, property owners, and anyone interested in wildlife and the environment to attend."

Further information can be obtained by calling the Harford Extension Office at (410) 838-6000, ext. 255.

Dr. T. Veum and others at the University of Missouri recently demonstrated that composting works for dead hogs. They utilized empty pens (approx 6.5 feet x 9.5 feet) in an open front hog building. To each pen they added a layer of straw (about 5 pounds per square foot), then a layer of dead pigs, followed by a dry manure-straw mixture and another layer of straw equal to one half of the weight of dead pigs. The layers were repeated until a final depth of about 3 feet was reached.

During a recent phone conversation, Dr. Veum shared the positives and negatives of their results. Composting was complete with smaller pigs (only a brown spot remained); however, larger hogs and sows did not break down completely, he believes, because the mixture may have gotten a little too dry. Not a single rodent was observed, but when the mixture was loaded onto the spreader at the end, there were lots of cockroaches.

He thought that 30 days would be enough to compost a batch after the last material is added, and he was even optimistic that the process would generate enough heat to keep it going through the winter months.

Summary

1. For large operations, sending pigs to the renderer continues to be the most economical and practical means for dead animal disposal. However, as rendering costs rise and the market value for rendered material shrinks, producers may need to consider alternatives.

2. Incineration is both effective and convenient, but it's also costly.

3. Burial is currently legal, but when done on a large scale, it probably threatens our ground water supplies.

4. Composting works, and with a little innovation, it may catch on in the years to come.

If we define ergonomics as fitting the workplace to the worker rather than fitting the worker to the workplace, we can also adapt this to animals as well. Let us examine some of the more recent needs of human and animal in the poultry barn or rabbit warren.

- Reduce ammonia or other toxic gas levels in the air at nostril level in a building to 0 to 20 ppm. Zero to 10 ppm is even better.
- Do not subject rabbits to continuous pulsating fluorescent light that is too bright or too intense. Incandescent light or high quality fluorescent light seems better. Rabbits can tolerate less than one foot candle of light at the feeder. Installing 1/5 of a watt per square foot of floor space 4 to 6 feet above cages may be adequate depending on reflectivity of walls and ceiling. Rabbits and humans must be able to see but do not need bright lights.

- Plant Norway Spruce or a variety of pine within 10 meters of the air inlet side of the animal shelter to act as a wind break in winter, give shade to inbound air in summer, and add precious oxygen to inbound air. Evergreen trees are believed by foresters to give off oxygen more months of the year than deciduous trees.

- House animals to give a minimum of 20 to 180 square inches of floor space per pound of live (non-fat) bird depending on the age and species. Young birds require much more floor space per pound of live weight than adult birds.

- Develop a list of one liners for your employees or consultants who work on your farm, such as:
A. Repair equipment immediately as needed to sustain the supply of unpolluted, high quality air, water, or feed to animals. B. Observe every animal in a flock or herd two or more times a day for health or needed adjustments to their environment. C. Surgery, such as caponizing or debeaking, can be done with precision, cleanliness, and successful technique or not done at all.

- Provide adequate, clean bedding in nests for breeders along with adequate nest location, number, space, lighting, and access for females ready to lay so that eggs are laid clean and the high quality in eggs is preserved. Animals produce more manure than any other product on the farm, so we must provide for manure drying, storage, movement, and conversion so as to have a useful fertilizer. Most farmers invest $5,000 to $50,000 annually in handling manure.

- In captivity, the animal and human worker have a home in the barn for 8 to 24 hours each and every day. This home works best if the environment is adequate.

FFA Members, Supporters Celebrate Week

To culminate National FFA Week, state Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff met with Adams County and state FFA members. The schools represented were Biglerville, Bermudian Springs, Gettysburg, Littlestown and New Oxford high schools. The group participated in a commemorative luncheon and tour at the Pennsylvania State University Biglerville Fruit Research Laboratory. From the left, front, pictured is Mandy Hilbert, Michelle Kerdeman, the state FFA reporter, Traci Laubaugh, and Evert Ramsburg. In the second row, from the left, is Chad Dutterer, Jason Shearer, Secretary Wolff, state FFA President Wayne Hassinger, Emily Lott, Bermudian Springs High School agriculture teacher John Wardle, and state president of the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association. In the rear, from the left is, Gettysburg High School agriculture teacher Ron Sollenberger, Erik Norton, Steve Chalk, Mike Oswald and Chad Ketterman.

PULL PLUG DRAINS LEAKING? TRI-COUNTY HAS THE SOLUTION!

APOLLO BALL

This convenient plug for hog manure drains makes a non-leaking seal on the clean-out drain in pull-plug manure systems. It is a major improvement over leaky, concrete plugs.

Sold as a plug and pipe adapter set, the Apollo Ball is a thick, industrial-grade rubber ball that fits into a specially made PVC socket. The ball is filled with sand, which gives it weight but leaves it pliable for a very reliable seal. Molded into its top is a sturdy ring, and attached to this ring is a stainless steel rod with a loop on the end. To open the drain for pen cleaning, you can easily use a simple long-handled hook to catch this loop and lift the ball from its socket.

The socket into which the Apollo Ball Plug seals can be installed on any 8" PVC drain pipe. And in new construction of hog barns, it can be easily included in poured concrete flooring.

Also can be adapted to 6" PVC drains.

Maryland Sheep, Wool Festival Set

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — A full range of activities awaits those who venture to the 1992 Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival.

The festival, now in its 19th year, will begin Friday, May 1 and extend through Sunday, May 3 at the Howard County Fairgrounds.

At the heart of the Festival is the sheep show, featuring 14 wool breeds, 1,000 head of sheep, and exhibitors from several states and Canada.

Two special events highlight the 1992 sheep show. On Saturday, May 2, there will be a regional Rambouillet show sponsored by the Great Lakes Rambouillet Association. Judge for the event is Dave Cook of New London, Ohio.

In addition, the Jacob Sheep Conservancy will be presenting the National Jacob Show. These ancient sheep are known for their distinct markings featuring a white fleece with random black markings, spotted heads, and 2 to 4 horns. These characteristics plus the quality of the Jacob's fleece have boosted their popularity in the U.S. and Canada.

The Festival, a must for sheep enthusiasts, will provide educational seminars with Bill Kruesi, a commercial sheep farmer and consultant. Kruesi works with sheep and goat producers in 13 states and Canada.

Friday evening, May 1, Kruesi will conduct a hands-on workshop on "Selecting Wool Type Rams." Throughout the day on Saturday there will be "Ask the Expert" workshops/demonstrations with Bill covering a wide range of sheep topics.

The Fleece Show and Sale provides producers of high quality fleece a market where handspinners can shop. Several hundred fleeces, judged on their suitability for handspinning, are displayed for competition and sale. The fleece competition features Natural Colored and White divisions as well as Breed Class Fleeces. The sale prices of the fleeces are set by the producers.

The sheep to shawl contest is slated for Saturday morning. Here, teams consisting of a shearer, a weaver, and three spinners compete to see who can produce the nicest garment in three hours or less. The sheep is shorn, the fleece carded and spun, and then woven into a shawl to be auctioned in the afternoon.

The Festival, the largest of its kind in the United States, brings together producers of sheep and products derived from them, the craftspersons who fashion finished goods, and the general public in a celebration of the entire sheep and wool industry.

The Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival is sponsored by the Maryland Sheep Breeders Association and is staged by volunteers. For further information on this event, contact Mary Streaker at (301) 823-4037 or Ann & Bill Ruppert (717) 642-5436.

Lehigh Sets Farm Preservation Meeting

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The Lehigh County Agricultural Land Preservation Board will be holding an information meeting on the county's farmland preservation program on Monday, March 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the Lehigh County Agricultural Center.

The meeting will focus on Lehigh County's Agricultural Conservation Easement Program and how landowners in the county can apply to permanently preserve their farmland by selling their development rights to the county and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A short video, entitled "Farmland Forever," will also be shown at the meeting. The video, produced by the American Farmland Trust, features from families explaining why they have made the decision to sell the rights to develop their land.

American Cyanamid Signs Research Agreement

PRINCETON, N.J. — American Cyanamid Company's Agricultural Research Division has signed an agreement with the University of Georgia Research Foundation, Inc. to develop insect baculovirus technology for use in improving the efficacy of these viruses as insecticides.

Baculoviruses, a group of naturally occurring viruses that attack only specific insects, have been used in the past for insect control. However, many are too slow acting and, consequently, only mildly effective under field conditions.

Advances in molecular biology now allow modification of baculoviruses to improve the natural process. Cyanamid researchers anticipate that this collaboration will lead to successful development and commercialization of viral insecticides with improved efficacy.

Based on the agreement, the University of Georgia and Cyanamid scientists will work together to improve insect control provided by naturally occurring baculoviruses.

Dr. Lois Miller, professor of entomology and genetics at the University of Georgia, a leading expert in baculovirus research, explains that biological insect control is expected to make more "tools" available to farmers.

She said, "You can argue all you want that farmers should not use pesticides, but there has to be an alternative. Otherwise, insects will be a major competitor for the human food supply and a lot of people will starve."

Dr. Dennis Ciarlante, associate director, crop protection discovery at American Cyanamid's Agricultural Research Division, said, "One reason why we are excited about this area of research is that baculoviruses are highly selective bioinsecticides and pose no threat to humans, wildlife, or non-target insects. We believe our research collaborations reinforce Cyanamid's commitment to our customers and the public to provide safe and effective crop protection products."

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Last week, more than 120 farmers attended a Dekalb alfalfa growers educational seminar. John Alwine, Middletown, honored for more than 50 years of service to the company, displays an old Dekalb 1955 seed bag with the corn hybrid, 422-MR-C. At that time, corn was sold in bushel bags (56 pounds each).

Dairy Days Winners

YORK (York Co.) — Evan Burkholder was the big winner at the 1992 Franklin County Dairy Days held recently at Kauffman Station.

Burkholder received $100 in cash plus $100 toward the purchase of a York Farm Credit Financial Management Service Package.

Compact Design Goes Into Skid Steer

OWATONNA, Minn. — Mustang Manufacturing Company, Inc. has introduced a new skid steer loader, the 921, to its 900 series.

This compact loader has an SAE load rating of 850 pounds and is just 48 in. wide. Powered by a 21 HP Onan gas engine, the hydrostatically driven 921 skid steer has a breakout force of 1,500 pounds and an axle torque of 2,800 ft. pounds.

"This machine can be the perfect unit for farmers, small landscaping or nurserymen and municipalities, as well as smaller dealers and rental centers," said Mike Spear, Mustang's vice president of marketing and sales.

"Its size allows to be very maneuverable and versatile for rural applications," he said. "And because it has a gas engine, the 921 loader can be serviced by the owner/operator. You don't need a diesel mechanic or have to take it someplace else to be serviced."

The 921 loader is the gas-powered version of Mustang's diesel-powered 920 loader, and it has all the same features operators expect from Mustang, including:

- T-Bar steering, which gives the operator full motion control through a single lever.
- Neutral centering and neutral start system for safety.
- Lift arm locks designed into ROPS/FOPS structure.
- Fast-A-Tach bucket mounting system.
- Vandal-proof engine compartment.

Other skid steer loaders in Mustang's 900 series are the 920, 930, 940 and 960, with SAE load ratings ranging from 850 pounds to 1,700 pounds. All are powered by diesel engines and hydrostatically driven. Specific data for the series includes:

	920	930	940	960
SAE load rating-lbs.	850	1,000	1,350	1,700
Breakout force-lbs.	1,800	1,975	4,100	5,000
Axle torque-ft. lbs.	3,160	3,175	4,300	5,850
HP@ rated RPM	19	28	38	57.5

Mustang also markets material handlers, compaction equipment, and self-propelled aerial work platforms.

Powered by a 21 HP Onan gas engine, the hydrostatically driven 921 skid steer has a breakout force of 1,500 pounds and an axle torque of 2,800 ft. pounds.

Get Even Stands

There's nothing more important to a crop than early, even emergence. To get it, you need accurate, even seeding, and a Case International 5300 End-Wheel Drill.

The 5300 has earned a reputation for its seeding precision, a function of its exclusive feed cup design and dependable disk openers. And, to improve placement of seed, the opener drawbars are heavier than on previous models. Press wheel and opener bearings are heavier for long life operation.

Along with accuracy, the 5300 gives you fast, high capacity seeding, so you spend less time refilling hoppers.

Hamilton Ag Day Speakers Offer View Of Future

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The agriculture lending department of Hamilton Bank held its 11th annual agricultural education seminar at the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center in Lancaster on Thursday, featuring economic outlooks for the 90s.

Regular speakers for the seminar were agricultural economics professors H. Louis Moore, from Pennsylvania State University, and David Kohl from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Also speaking was Orion C. Samuelson, radio and television agricultural reporter in the Midwest for 31 years. He is based out of Chicago.

Samuelson gave an entertaining presentation that was a mix of upbeat, "I can do it" philosophical messages with a number of anecdotes.

He talked mostly about the limits of resources in the nation and how the conflict between agricultural producer and neighbor-consumers should increase with increases in populations.

He said that farmers need to make every effort to create a positive atmosphere for dialogue between himself and his neighbor, who knows less and less about the methodology and requirements of agriculture and how it relates to the average citizen.

Moore has been a popular speaker at a number of different farmer seminar this year and repeated his messages.

In his presentation, Kohl said the the world and the United States are facing drastic and unprecedented changes, which call for more than waiting out a recession. Rather than call the present economic situation a recession or a depression, Kohl referred to it as a "restructuring" that will take years to enact.

He said that in the 1990s, money will not be the primary priority among workers, he said the most highly valued commodity will be time.

According to Kohl, the changes in the world will be slow and steady, but offers great opportunities for all, especially agriculture.

Kohl emphasized the growing importance of free time in a story he told about a recent visit to Florida.

Kohl said he regularly runs three to four miles every morning for exercise and while he was in Florida, staying at a hotel, he had been running along a relatively isolated stretch of highway that skirted the shoreline.

Several mornings of running had gone by without incident he said when one morning he noticed a man in a jogging outfit curled up on a bench holding a brown paper bag.

He said that as he ran closer to the man, it became more apparent that the situation was not normal. He said that he had thought that perhaps the man had a bottle in the bag, and so decided to run past the man.

As he passed the man, the man jumped up and gave chase and started calling to Kohl to stop so that they could talk.

Eventually after being chased a distance, Kohl said he decided to confront the man and stopped and quickly turned around. At that time, the man pulled out a handgun from the paper bag, and, at close distance, told Kohl he was going to kill him.

Kohl said he decided his best chance for survival, or to bring attention to his plight, was to run out into traffic, which he did.

He said that the man with the gun had continued to follow him, paralleling the highway and Kohl's efforts to continue to escape.

Eventually police arrived, responding to a number of phone calls made by drivers with car telephones, and the man was arrested, but only after he stripped and jumped off of a bridge.

Kohl said police found the gun unloaded, but also discovered that the man had been recently released from a mental institution because of a lack of funding due to national economic problems.

Kohl said he still has nightmares about the incident, but the story gave more impact to his message of prioritizing time over money.

However, Kohl said money will continue to be an issue with everyone, especially farmers.

He offered several pieces of information from which to draw perspective of the current state of affairs and what may happen.

According to Kohl: 48 percent of American farms are debt-free;

the average farm debt is $2.66 for every dollar of income; the average equity is 82 percent; one in five

Symposium To Focus On Preventive Medicine

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Why do vaccinations sometimes fail to prevent disease in cattle herds? What happens when drugs are not used according to the label directions? How do producers decide what their herd's vaccination program should be?

These and other questions about preventive medicine in beef cattle herds will be discussed at the Eastern Cattlemen's Symposium on March 26 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Penn State Meats Lab at University Park. Held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, the symposium will bring together veterinarians, meat scientists, producers and regulators to discuss cattle health issues.

"The discussion will start with the economics of a preventive health program," said symposium organizer Dr. John Comerford, assistant professor of dairy and animal science at Penn State. "From there, we'll address a number of concerns and challenges to herd health."

Dr. Merlin Kaeberle, professor of microbiology and immunology at the Iowa State College of Veterinary Medicine, will discuss the effect of the animal's environment on vaccine performance and the reasons vaccines sometimes fail to prevent disease.

Dr. Dean Elliot of the Troy Veterinary Clinic will analyze vaccination programs for dairy-beef calves. Dr. Kurt Wohlgemuth, manager of technical services for Smith, Kline-Beecham Animal Health, will discuss vaccination programs for cow herds and young calves, focusing on available products and how they are best used.

Dr. William Henning, Penn State assistant professor of animal science, will explain how producers can avoid causing carcass damage during injections, a problem that costs the beef industry millions of dollars annually.

The implications of not following the label directions on cattle drugs will be examined by Dr. Gerald Guest of the Food and Drug Administration's Center for Veterinary Medicine. He will discuss the need to maintain a high level of integrity in using these drugs.

The symposium will conclude with a panel discussion of how veterinarians and producers can work together more efficiently to prevent disease in cattle. The discussion will be followed by a question-and-answer period.

The registration fee of $20 includes a copy of the symposium proceedings and "Keystone Ribeye Steak on a Roll" for lunch. Preregistration is encouraged since seating may be limited. Registration forms for the symposium are available from Penn State Cooperative Extension county offices and members of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, or by calling Dr. John Comerford at (814) 863-3661.

farms earns $4 out of every $5 income; direct payments from federal farm programs will continue, to be sliced; 65 percent of American farms already report working off the farm; 33 percent of those report that one spouse works more than 200 days a year off the farm; the average living and income and income taxes for a family of four is $26,000 to $30,000 a year;

Also, 75 percent of the land will change ownership in the next 20 years (most of the land will be owned by women 70 years or older); deferred taxes will be the biggest liability on all farmers' balance sheets; medical cost will be the cut the most into farm expenses; there are 20 farmers older than 55 for every one farmer younger than 35; agriculture seems to be settling into several major areas — those with the best land, water, rural infrastructure, and general population growth;

Prime ag areas are experiencing steady increases in land values while other areas, especially inner city areas will continue to show steady declines in land value; fixed costs of operations is the biggest weakness to global competition (he suggested that farmers only use from 8 percent to 10 percent of their annual income for living expenses, instead of the 15 to 20 percent currently being used); environmental audits are going to be regulated next, though he said that it makes no sense to pay to have one done now since there are no requirements for those who conduct them; a technology wave will hit agriculture in the mid 1990s; and only one out of every four farmers will be able to adapt to the changes in technology because of limits of money and labor.

Veal Producers Attend Seminar

RONALD CLARK
Susquehanna Co. Correspondent
TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Animal Medic, Inc., distributors of animal health and farm supplies, were the hosts to about 75 veal producers and interested parties at a seminar on raising healthy veal and dairy beef animals.

Galen L. Martin, sales manager for Animal Medic Inc., introduced the speakers and also participated in the program.

LaVere Hook was been a specialist in veal production, has been a producer of veal, and has been associated with Animal Medic for the past 14 years. He described the quality assurance program in the veal industry.

Pointing out the problems faced, he emphasized proper pen preparation, including repairs as well as disinfection, and the maintenance of proper temperature in the calf pens. This often entails heating while exhausting stale air, since warmth and good ventilation are both essential. If the temperatures fall too low, stress on the calves is increased, and probably young calves are the most stressed of any animal.

Veal producers have to purchase calves, of course, and must rely on their sources for calves of adequate weights and condition. Producers should insist on proper means of transport from source to the growers' farms. Large numbers of dairy calves are used as vealers, and farmers must be aware of the importance of the initial feeding of colostrum. It is apparent that good communications and good relations must be kept between farmers, buyers who furnish calves to the veal producers, and the producers.

Dr. Glenn Lore, Bovidr Laboratories, Inc., is a recognized expert on health problems in calves and products which can make prevention and treatment of health problems more meaningful. Stating that pneumonia and scours are the two most serious health problems, Lore used illustrations to show the anatomy of lungs, as well as methods of maintaining good immune systems in calves.

Calves are exceptionally susceptible to pneumonia because of the small size of the tracheal passage. This limits oxygen exchange. Furthermore, the number of capillaries per unit of a calf's lungs is less than in other species, while the alveoli or air sacs are singular, not communicating with others in other species. Therefore, when dust plugs one bronchial, that section of the lung is lost to the exchange of oxygen, and any trapped bacteria will progress into pneumonia. Also, fewer white blood cells are avail-

Dr. Glenn Lore, Bovidr Laboratories, Inc., presented an informative talk on health problems in calves and ways to cope with them.

Lore pointed out the events which often lead to pneumonia in calves. They are dust inhalation; dehydration; starvation resulting in hypoglycemia, which in turn reduces white blood cells' normal phagocytic action and defeats effectiveness of antibiotics, stress, chilling in transport; micronutrient deficiencies which impair immune function, and virus conditions which depress white blood cells and damage the surface of the respiratory tract.

As pneumonia develops, bacterial toxins depress the appetite and cause congestion of the lungs. Body temperature increases, and with this basal metabolism increases at the rate of 20 percent for every degree of elevation. Diarrhea often accompanies high temperature, causing dehydration and loss of potassium. The excessive energy requirement causes ketosis, while hypoglycemia sets in, preventing effectiveness of antibiotics. Damage is caused to body tissue cells, preventing cellular function.

Diarrhea or scours can be lessened by making sure that the newborn calf gets colostrum, which contains gram positive bacteria. This is a healthy situation. Gram negative pathogens normally are found in the large intestine. But some factors which encourage onset of diarrhea are irregular feeding, chilling, and over feeding, since these factors interfere with normal peristalsis. When this occurs, gram negative bacteria will back up into the digestive system and result in diarrhea. Virus can also cause similar action. Conditions similar to those caused by pneumonia follow.

Lore then introduced Veal Nutri-Drench, a product manufactured for Bovidr Laboratories. This new product has the ability to correct metabolic problems, immune failure, and nutrient deficiencies which occur in calves as a result of pneumonia and diarrhea. In this product is rapidly available energy sources, improving digestion, use and speed of nutrient bioavailability of vitamins, trace minerals and amino acids. Use of this material for calves should be immediately upon arrival at the

Lore showed the functions of various micronutrients. These include glucose, Vitamins A, D and E, and selenium, choline, thiamine, (B vitamin), amino acids, copper, potassium, magnesium, cobalt, zinc, and iron. He described what each of these elements does in the digestive process and the body in general.

In his presentation, Scott Remington president of Agri Labs, Ltd., showed how the new calf is a most highly stressed animal, often mishandled. He emphasized the need for proper nutrition, sanitation, and preventive medicine — vaccines and proper administration of feed materials which tend to strengthen the immune system. He did state that in spite of adhering to good practices, sometimes sickness will occur, and proper treatment, including antibiotics if necessary, must be speedily done. He described products recommended for use in sanitation, and went on to cattle diseases and their symptoms and methods of transmission, as well as preventive measures which should be taken.

Remington presented a vaccination schedule for the 11 most common diseases affecting calves. After describing pharmaceuticals distributed by Animal Medic, he distributed a "Veal Producers Handbook," which includes complete information on all of the above subjects. Veal producers can obtain a copy of this booklet from their Animal Medic/Agri Laboratories dealer.

Responding to a question about the comparative costs and effectiveness of modified live virus vaccine versus killed virus vaccine, Remington emphasized that killed virus cannot enhance the growth of any disease organisms already in the animal's body, while in some cases modified virus can. Therefore he recommends against the use of modified virus vaccines.

Because of legal requirements off-label use of any substance must be avoided. This includes departing from recommended dosage. Proper dosage is the result of testing and proved effectiveness.

LeVere Hook went on to describe several products available from Animal Medic, and gave convincing data on benefits which result from their proper use. He cited different methods of administration of some of the products. Pointing out the value of probiotics, he showed that studies have demonstrated up to 26 additional pounds of market weight, with all other factors are kept equal. Other products including antibiotics available were mentioned by Remington. He emphasized reading labels, following directions in both use and limitations, and withdrawal times for all products.

Finally, Galen Martin demonstrated a new product for lice control. It is a collar impregnated with amitraz, a systemic product, which has a long life and can be used on calves, dairy beef, and beef stock.

Wilkinson Becomes Distinguished Professor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Board of Trustees recently named Dr. Kenneth P. Wilkinson, professor of rural sociology, a distinguished professor.

"Dr. Wilkinson has compiled a truly remarkable record as a scholar and is generally recognized as the leading community theorist in the United States and one of the most influential community theorists in the world," said Dr. Shannon Stokes, head of agricultural economics and rural sociology.

Wilkinson received strong recommendations from his peers at other universities. His major scholarly contribution has been the development of a distinctive analytical framework, known as the field theory of community, for research on community action and social well-being in distressed areas.

Wilkinson and other researchers have used this framework to examine changes in rural communities across the United States and in other countries, including Ireland, Italy, Morocco, Sri Lanka, and India.

Wilkinson's scholarly work includes more than 60 articles, books and reports. His most recent book, "The Community In Rural America," was published last year by the Greenwood Press, Westport, Conn.

PUMP OUT PIT FAN

Many manure storage pits have been constructed without providing for ventilation of the pit, particularly in buildings constructed several years ago when pit storage was first popular.

A non-ventilated pit results in a build-up of harmful, caustic gases, such as carbon dioxide, hydrogen sulfide, methane, ammonia and mercaptans. Hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide are heavier than air and, as the level of pit waste rises closer to the slats, the gases are forced closer to the animals. Results of inhaling these gases may be deep, fast breathing from CO₂. Hydrogen sulfide is one of the most toxic gases to animals and humans associated with liquid manure storage. This gas can cause severe irritation to the eyes and respiratory system and sometimes can result in death.

Kinder Seed Produces New Ground Cover

BUFFALO, N.Y. — When it comes to solving the ground cover problems of orchard, vineyard, and Christmas tree farm owners in the northeastern United States, experts say that a new breed of revolutionary turfgrass called Supra Poa supina may be just what the doctor ordered.

Discovered by German plant breeders on Alpine Mountain goat trails more than 20 years ago and used successfully by groundskeepers on European soccer fields today, this new breed of turfgrass is said to be ideally suited for Northeastern orchard, vineyard, and Christmas tree growers.

Supra Poa supina is a remarkably low-growing, wear tolerant, and shade tolerant turfgrass that provides a no-fault, environmentally friendly solution to the ground cover problem.

Experts boast that Supra Poa supina has exceptional shade tolerance, while German plant breeders claim that it is the single most shade tolerant species available.

In a four-year test that was limited to a maximum 40 percent sunlight at any one time, Supra Poa supina was found to have amazingly maintained 90 percent to 100 percent ground cover.

And, if left unmowed, Supra Poa Supina grows to a height of only five inches.

This low-growing characteristic is of great benefit in orchards and vineyards, and it is unlike other turfgrasses which grow at least knee-high when not mowed.

"Essentially it benefits northeastern growers by allowing him to solve his ground cover problems while not harming the environment," said Drew Kinder, owner of Buffalo-based Kinder Seed Inc., an exclusive distributor of Supra Poa supina.

"The fact is Supra Poa supina seems to meet customer requirements that have not been met by seeds currently used in the Northeast. Simply put, it's a problem-solving seed," Kinder said.

The Supra Poa supina solution includes:

- No mowing. Supra Poa supina grows no higher than five inches high. Although no mowing is required, one mowing per year results in a sod farm-type appearance.

- No herbicides for weed or growth control. This species spreads vigorously through above-ground lateral shoots which choke out weeds and unwanted grasses.

- No moisture competition during the dry summer months. A shallow rooted plant, Supra Poa supina goes dormant during dry periods. Summer rains pass directly through to tree or vine roots.

- No soil erosion. Because it establishes rapidly and spreads out, Supra Poa supina forms a dense, shade tolerant sod that reduces wind and water erosion.

- No mud at harvest time. Supra Poa supina sod allows unrestricted access to fields during rainy periods. Christmas tree growers are quick to appreciate the value of clean, mud-free trees.

And as a native of the Alps, Supra Poa supina has excellent tolerance for the cold and maintains a rich, green color in below-freezing conditions.

Supra Poa supina was originally selected by West German plant breeders on a grass collecting trip in the Alps. There they found a species of grass growing on mountain goat trails. Most trails were bare dirt, but in some areas, this species persisted. After 20 years of plant breeding improvements, Supra Poa supina was released as a named variety of the Poa supina species.

Kinder of Buffalo's Kinder Seed, Inc., said the recommended planting dates for Supra Poa supina are August 15 to September 15 or early spring.

He stressed that non-irrigated late spring or summer seedings should not be attempted because of Supra Poa supina's shallow root structure and requirement for adequate moisture after establishment.

For more information about Supra Poa Supina, contact Drew Kinder, Kinder Seed, Inc., Buffalo, N.Y., (716) 891-8955.

Northwest Maple Producers Meet

SPARTANSBURG (Crawford Co.)—The 31st annual meeting of the Northwest Maple Producers' Association was held at the Spartansburg Fire Hall recently.

President Dave Livingston welcomed producers and gave opening remarks with speaker introductions.

The featured speaker of the day was Russ Walters, research forester, principal silviculturist. Russ presented a slide show on "Gypsy Moth in the Sugar Bush."

Russ started off with how the gypsy moth originated back in 1869, brought over from Europe to develop a silkworm. Today the gypsy moth has affected areas from Maine to Pennsylvania.

Russ went over the various oak trees the moth prefers. The maple tree is not the most preferred species, but it is intermediate with a 5 percent mortality rate. Next he went over the four stages of complete metamorphosis of the gypsy moth, those being egg, larva, pupa and adult stages, along with what month each takes place.

Russ noted the adult moths do not feed and that only the males fly. A healthy egg mass is the size of a quarter. The gypsy moth spread with the wind and are one to two inches in length, fuzzy and hairy with a yellow head. Their natural enemy is a virus.

There are other insects that defoliate too, such as the forest tent caterpillar, which is a problem in New England. Russ said, "It never hurts a maple tree not to be tapped or only tap half as much." A little Pine Sol and water sprayed on egg masses will help cut down outbreaks.

Another defoliator discussed was the Pear thrip and their life history. Pear thrips are all females, and sole purpose is regeneration. They defoliate the trees, lower sap, and hurt seed production and sugar content in sap by damaging the crowns. Plots and testing are being conducted; as of now, there is no good control.

Sugar bush management, sap production, and stand improvements was the final subject. Russ showed slides how larger crowns produce more sweet sap volume and how proper thinning of trees and sample testing are important for high profit potential, increased sap yield, and sweeter trees. Managing and selecting trees in stand opens the stand for trees to obtain deeper crowns and benefit their growth.

John Deets, producer from Titusville, then gave a Farm Show report, noting the prices of syrup, with gallons selling for $35. Northwest Association took second place with their exhibit. Deets Sugar House was awarded the premier exhibitor and best of show.

Joyce Pierce, secretary of the Downtown Business Association of Meadville, then spoke on ideas for the first Maple Festival in Meadville April 11. Joyce went over a list of merchants who would work with maple producers and the various places to have maple demonstrations.

Election of officers was conducted. New directors elected were Burton Kimball, Tom Kornman, Randy Northrop and Janet Woods, alternate.

Porch Is Grower Of Year

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. — Kenneth Porch received the Vegetable Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Grower of the Year Award from Rutgers Cooperative Extension at the annual Atlantic City meeting of the Vegetable Growers Association of New Jersey.

The award was presented by Dr. Donald J. Prostak, extension specialist in pest management, in appreciation and recognition of the vegetable grower who best exemplifies the adoption, practice, and support of the vegetable IPM program.

On his Pedricktown, Salem County, farm, Porch has followed sweet corn IPM program recommendations for 19 years. IPM techniques and practices help growers maintain the quality of their produce while minimizing the economic and environmental impact of unnecessary pesticide use.

His cooperation in the early years was instrumental in the development and implementation of the IPM program strategies as they are used today.

The 225-acre Porch farm grows a varied abundance of fresh market vegetables, including sweet corn, tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, squash, and sweet potatoes. Porch serves on the Rutgers University board of managers and as director for the First Home Savings Bank. He is a former mayor of Oldmans Township.

Kenneth Porch, left, of Pedricktown, N.J., receives the Rutgers Cooperative Extension IPM Grower of the Year Award from Dr. Donald J. Prostak, extension specialist in pest management. Ken received this award in appreciation and recognition for his adoption, practice, and support of the Rutgers Vegetable IPM Program.

Who's Minding The Capitol Store?

Editor's note: This is the text of the speech presented by John Hoffman at the recent Pennsylvania Gamebird Conference.

John Hoffman
Executive Director
Pennsylvania
Poultry Federation

The Pennsylvania General Assembly introduces about 3,500 bills every year. However, only a fraction of these ever get signed into law. For example only 53 of the 3,773 bills introduced in 1991 became law. That was, however, a bit low in comparison to 223 bills approved in 1990; 112 in 1989; 193 in 1988 and 93 in 1987. But, of the few bills that do survive the legislative process, only a small percentage actually represent meaningful legislation.

Consider that among the 53 laws passed in 1991, four were to name roads or bridges, three pertain to barbers, one changed the name of the Fish Commission to the Fish and Boat Commission, one designated May 27 as Rachel Carson Day, and several just extended the existence of current government agencies and commission. And every legislative year produces bills to officially adopt a state song or state insect.

Having all that information, you may ask yourself whether we need to concern ourselves with state government. Well, we do for two reasons. First, no one knows for certain how many or which of the 3,500 bills introduced each year will reach the Governor's desk for signature. Secondly, there are always a few bills passed in every legislative session that impact on a large number of Pennsylvanians, either as private citizens or within their profession or vocation.

All this activity, of course, demands that somebody had better be minding the capitol store. Well, somebody is! And although this "somebody" always includes a very small number of private citizens who occasionally write or visit their legislators, it is the professional paid lobbyist who is the primary watchdog of legislators and congressmen.

Lobbyists are paid a salary or fee to represent the interest of a special group or organization. Lobbyists must register with the state government every year so that there can be no secret about the fact that their views represent a vested interest. If you as a private citizen want to lobby legislators and are not going to be paid for your time, you do not need to register, of course. In addition, if paid lobbyists spend over $300 a month entertaining legislators, they must report those expenses to state government.

There are over three hundred registered lobbyists in Harrisburg who represent farmers, doctors, school teachers, insurance agents, hotels, automobile dealers, libraries, builders, engineers, lawyers, travel agencies, electric companies, soft drinks, newspapers, accountants, restaurants, dentists, planned parenthood, school buses, realtors, recreational vehicles, campers, bankers, cosmetology, and dry cleaners just to name a very few. Penn State University employs a full time lobbyist in Harrisburg and I am a registered lobbyist, although we employ another registered lobbyist to look after our governmental affairs.

The term lobbyist sometimes has a negative connotation, but legislators are very dependent upon them. Lobbyists very often are the experts on the subject matter of pending legislation. They also frequently represent the position of the majority of the group that will be affected by the legislation. And, more often than not, both sides of an issue are usually represented by lobbyists. For every lobbyist who is in support of a specific bill, there is usually at least one lobbyist that is opposed to the bill. This, of course, results in legislators getting a thorough understanding of the benefits and consequences of their legislative proposals.

By this time, many of you might be wondering if you are represented by a lobbyist in state capitol and in Washington. Without knowing the specifics, I can say with some certainty that you probably are. Most likely your representation comes from three groups: consumer organizations, agricultural organizations, and sportsmen's organizations. That is not to suggest you are always in agreement with the official position of these groups. But frequently they are protecting your interest when you may be totally unaware of their existence.

In Pennsylvania, the game bird industry has very specific ties to their agricultural representation. Three members of the Pennsylvania Game Breeders Association are members of the Pennsylvania Turkey Council, a division of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation. In addition, I serve as an advisor to the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Game breeder's association. This relationship gives the game bird industry direct access to the Federation's lobbyist, one of the most influential in Harrisburg, George Wolff of Wolff Associates.

The Pennsylvania Game Breeders Association also maintains continuous dialogue and communication with Pennsylvania Sportsmen's organizations, several of which are influential with the Pennsylvania General Assembly and the Pennsylvania Game Commission. I dare say that these relationships make the Pennsylvania Game Breeder's Association one of the best represented state game bird associations in the country.

Before concluding, I will give you an update from Harrisburg, the state capitol. Those of you from other states are not likely to hear anything in this report that is unlike your problems in your state. Last August, Pennsylvania passed the largest single tax increase in the history of this state. Most of us believed that this record 3.3 billion tax increase would resolve our budget crisis. And as late as October some tax experts were predicting we were actually overtaxed and the tax increase would result in a billion dollar surplus. However, since then, the recession in Pennsylvania has worsened and tax revenues are falling short of projections. Therefore, the Governor has sequestered $425 million of the state budget to prevent a deficit by the end of the fiscal year on June 30, 1992. Sequestered funds are monies that cannot be spent until released by the Governor. The Governor also has on the drawing board two more sequestered funds action if necessary that would raise the total to $600 million and $750 million, respectively. If there is a budget deficit this year, the commonwealth plans to reduce government services and not raise taxes to balance next year's budget.

Originally these sequestered funds locked up the entire budget for the Animal Health Commission. However, since the Commission was a creation of the Casey Administration, the Governor has had second thoughts about that and released the money. But since the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture had to take its fair share of these sequestered funds, $1.4 million of agricultural research funds are being withheld from the universities and they may never receive it. In some cases, the universities have already proceeded with these research projects spending their own money in the expectations they would be reimbursed by the state.

Finally, the one legislative issued that has the attention of the entire agricultural community and the game bird industry is mandatory nutrient management. House Bill 496 would require the majority of commercial farms to submit nutrient management plans for approval and implementation to local soil conservation districts. At risk are all the existing animal industries in Pennsylvania, including game birds, that may be out of compliance with the standards which will be imposed.

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation has a nutrient management committee to work with the Department of Environmental Resources and The Pennsylvania General Assembly in developing these standards and regulations. Mr. Bill Trace represents game birds on that committee.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Well-Kept Dairy Farms For 1992 Beautification Recognition Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is ready to receive applications for 1992. This program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan Baker, dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has received great acceptance in the past and officers look forward to a good response again this year. "There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in past years, should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent in now to apply for the award. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1991. Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district. A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use

Lancaster Farming to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time to apply for you and your farm to receive the coveted honor of Dairy of Distinction. This award is based on the concept that attractive farms enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encouraging public support for the dairy industry."

Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Evelyn Lightfoote, 3053 Depew Road, Stanley, N.Y. 14561. Phone: (716) 526-6654. In New Jersey, contact August Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (201) 735-4989. In Pennsylvania, contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association/Dairy Council, Tower Business Bldg., 239 Schuyler Ave., Kingston, PA 18704.

Pennsylvania Districts

Pennsylvania is divided into ten districts. Approximately 10 Dairy of Distinction awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to the applicant.

Pennsylvania area chairpersons are: District 11, Leslie Firth; District 12, Wally Jackson; District 13, Susan DuJour; District 14, Janet and David Hileman; District 15, Norman Coons; District 16, Robert and Bernice Gable; District 17, Larue Thomas; District 18, Allen Roszel; District 19, Lisa Risser; and District 20, Russell Rooks.

As a winner, you will receive a certificate and a nice metal sign to install at the end of your farm lane. In addition, LANCASTER FARMING will present a color farm portrait print to each of this year's winners in Pennsylvania. If your farm is a winner, be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends the negative and proof to LANCASTER FARMING in time for the awards ceremony.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm.
John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency.
The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

The Eby Wrangler...

- ★ Better Looking
- ★ Better Built
- ★ Better Value

The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wrangler 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
 - Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
 - Aerodynamic, attractive design
 - Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
 - 2-year warranty
- Specifications
- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
 - 7' Width
 - 6'6" Inside height

Grange Testifies On Unfair Trade

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Large projection numbers for population growth in foreign countries in the next century offer a good opportunity for increasing agricultural exports and opening access to these markets, according to the Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director.

Brenda Shambaugh testified before Sen. Arlen Specter at a hearing recently about the importance of bringing the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations to a successful conclusion.

"There must be substantial improvements in the international trading rules pertaining to agricultural commodities or the entire multilateral trade negotiations will fail," Shambaugh said. "We cannot allow this to happen because of the negative impact it would have on all world trade, especially in the finance sectors."

In lieu of a totally open market, the Grange offered suggestions on how to overcome export/import problems:

- Because subsidies are paid in many foreign countries on agricultural products, imported products can be less expensive than their domestic counterparts. In these cases, domestic producers need to be protected with countervailing tax, or import quotas and/or fees.
- The Grange does not approve of inspection procedures or standards that limit agricultural imports, according to Shambaugh. However, imported products should meet the same standards applied to domestic goods. Also, since some chemicals which are banned in this country are used in other countries, imports should not contain residues of those chemical products.

• Foreign companies are buying U.S. enterprises at an alarming pace. "We must be ready to limit the percentage of foreign ownership in any one U.S. enterprise if the financial control of that section of our economy is threatened by foreign entities," Shambaugh said.

• The Grange recommends that dairy product imports not be increased until the GATT negotiations are successfully completed to ban export subsidies on dairy products that are imported into the United States and barriers to the United States' exports of dairy products into foreign markets are removed.

• The United States should consider negotiating long-term trade agreements with our foreign customers to increase our export sales.

• USDA should participate more in administration and distribution of the United States' share of the world's food programs.

• Export credits should continue, including C.C.C.'s blended credit program to aid in moving farm products into protected markets.

Huge Tractor Show Attracts Hundreds

The pulsating throb of farming's golden "hay-day" thundered once again through the crisp winter air of Lebanon Valley last Saturday.

The largest two-cylinder vintage tractor sale ever held in the East echoed sounds of farming's mechanized past across the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

Sitting in the mobile auction booth and explaining the tractors was Lloyd J. Wenger, Myerstown.

"We spent years finding and amassing such a collection and due to their scarcity and growing popularity there may never again be such a large number in the same place at one time," he said.

His interest in antique tractors also extends to a collection of kids pedal tractors and other agricultural memorabilia of museum size and quality.

But on Saturday the spotlight centered on the large collection of farm tractors that dated as far back as nearly a half century.

The sale, attractive enough to keep almost 700 registered bidders and many more onlookers out all day in single-digit wind chills, displayed proof of the popularity of these machines with hearts and skeletons of pure iron rather than plastic and alloys.

Most of the 120-odd tractors wore the familiar green and yellow mantle over two-cylinder engines of the only major agriculture machinery manufacturer without a name change — John Deere.

Soon, there was a field full of machines hollering their twin lungs out. Besides the Deeres was a scattering of other vintage models, such as red-bellied 8N Fords, deep green Olivers and Minneapolis Molines, with almost as much iron as a small battleship in their blocks.

The Johnny Pop-Ups which ranged from a massive tank-sized "R" to a garden vanity "L" were the center of attention.

Their chugging throbs, bobbing frontends and quivering fenders brought chills up and down the spines of both farmers who used them and collectors who wished they had.

The vibrant action of the tractors was reflected in the spirited bidding they generated.

Queen of the sale at $9,700 was a little restored John Deere 330 utility whose owner can now be numbered among a select group of a few hundred. It went to Charlotte, NC.

The collecting value of the rare 330 was exemplified by the protective plastic shielding wrapped around the housing that contained the serial plate. Many an auction company has been hit in recent years by people who chisel off the plates for possible later counterfeit use.

Nearby a giant cousin — a John Deere 60 Hi-Crop, a conventional tractor on stilts — resembled a crouching grasshopper. It brought $9,000 and headed for Iowa.

A more squat and stubby John Deere 80 stopped at $7,000. It even sported a factory cab — a rarity back in the mid-'50s when farmers mostly drove tractors in the open air year-round and not in climate-controlled cocoons where they can't feel, smell, or hear the results of their labor. The 80 also went to North Carolina.

There were tractors with original hour meters still in the hundreds — the farm equivalent of a car driven by a little old grandmother only on Sunday afternoon.

A 2000 Ford with 105 hours went south and may spend the rest of its days in the Florida sunshine.

The Saturday sale was preceded Friday night by a reception and open house at the Wengers tractor

The sale-goers were shown the staggering variety and number of tractor parts warehoused to a height of 18 feet across an area the size of a football field.

USDA Targets Export Markets

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan announced allocations under the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP) to help exporters of U.S. milk powder, butterfat and Cheddar cheese compete on the world market.

"This program helps U.S. dairy farmers, processors, manufacturers and exporters gain access to foreign markets and compete against subsidized competition," said Madigan. "It's an opportunity for the U.S. dairy industry to demonstrate the quality of its products to foreign buyers."

Export sales will be facilitated through the payment of bonuses by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Commodity Credit Corporation. Sales of milk powder, butterfat, and Cheddar cheese will be made through normal commercial channels at competitive world prices.

Bonuses under the program are available to 84 countries totaling 150,800 metric tons of milk powder, 70 countries totaling 41,800 metric tons of butterfat and to 13 countries totaling 4,700 metric tons of Cheddar cheese as allocated as shown in the tables below.

These allocations will be valid until Dec. 31, as provided in the invitation for offers. Details of the program, including an invitation for offers, will be issued in the near future.

The DEIP was created by the Food Security Act of 1985 and extended by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990.

For more information call Randy Baxter, (202) 720-5540, or L.T. McElvain, (202) 720-6211.

How Calcium Nitrate fertilizer can improve the yield and quality of cole crops

Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, sprouts and collards are typically grown under cool soil, short season conditions. The fertilizer must perform accordingly.

Precise nitrogen control is vital to optimum growth

Calcium Nitrate provides fast-acting nitrate nitrogen—the key to nitrogen control in short season crops. Calcium Nitrate goes to work immediately, even under cool soil conditions. The result is controlled, uniform crop nutrition.

Nitrate nitrogen has many advantages over ammonium nitrogen

Nitrate nitrogen is immediately available for plant use; ammonium fertilizers, however, must convert to nitrate. This conversion takes time and can vary depending on soil temperature, moisture, aeration and soil pH. Uneven or delayed nitrogen availability can result in erratic nitrogen feeding during the season and can affect crop growth, maturity and quality.

In addition, urea or ammonium nitrogen fertilizers lower soil pH. This does not occur with Calcium Nitrate.

Calcium is an essential nutrient for leaf and heading crops. Rapidly expanding leaves must draw calcium through water movement from roots for proper development of leaf tissues. A deficiency of calcium can cause leaf margins to become dried or burned; this is particularly evident in the youngest leaves.

Calcium Nitrate provides 19% water-soluble calcium for vital growth requirements, and contributes to better color, firmness and improved shipping quality.

Nutritional excellence

Calcium Nitrate is an ideal combination of fast-acting nitrate nitrogen and water-soluble calcium. Nutritional excellence for the crop you count on!

As with any fertilizer application consult your extension office or other advisory service for recommended practice that meets local crop and soil conditions.

Feeding By-Products Benefits Hog Producers, Environment

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Months of depressed hog prices have prompted some Pennsylvania swine producers to adopt a feeding strategy that reduces costs and makes use of food processing wastes, said a swine specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Several producers are feeding their hogs food processing by-products to help reduce feed expenses," said Dr. Kenneth Kephart, associate professor of animal science. "This practice cuts costs and helps reduce the volume of useful materials ending up in the state's landfills."

Pennsylvania's 2,333 food processing operations generate an estimated 4.8 million tons of solid waste annually. As disposal costs skyrocket, the industry is doing everything possible to reduce waste.

"Studies show that swine can safely and profitably consume food wastes and other by-products if their nutritional value is known," Kephart said.

"Many by-products, such as outdated bread or broken candy bars, may not meet rigid quality control standards set by food processors but are perfectly safe in animal rations. If by-product feeding programs are well managed, they are perfectly safe for both the animals and the people who eat their meat." Bakery by-products, such as broken cookies, pretzels and stale bread, can be used as a corn substitute in a hog's diet. "The nutritional value of most of these by-products equals or exceeds that of corn, which is the major source of energy for hogs and constitutes about 60 percent of feed costs," Kephart said. "Most bakery wastes generally can be substituted for grain pound-for-pound as long as producers pay close attention to salt levels."

Milk by-products, such as liquid whey, can supply both energy and protein. "Hog producers generally use soybean meal as a protein source, which constitutes about 25 percent of the cost of feed," Kephart said. "Producers can greatly reduce or eliminate the costs of supplemental protein by using milk by-products."

Food processing by-products can be very inexpensive. Processors desperate to beat soaring disposal costs often give them to producers for nothing, but transportation, handling and storage concerns can make their use impractical.

"Milk by-products, for example, contain a lot of water and are very heavy, which boosts transportation costs," Kephart said.

"Milk by-products also spoil rapidly if not refrigerated, so they must be used within a day or two. Most bakery wastes are fairly dry, but some contain enough moisture to cause spoilage if not used in a week or two.

"By-product feeding is a complex proposition," Kephart said. "It's not something any producer should jump into haphazardly. Factors such as nutrient content, palatability, and effects on performance need to be carefully considered.

Horse Expo, Trade Fair In Intercourse

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — An International Horse Expo and Equine Trade Fair will be held Saturday, March 28 and Sunday, March 29 at Martins Sales Pavilion located two miles east of Intercourse, Pa.

Larry L. Martin and Paul Z. Martin, Jr., owners of Martin Auctioneers, Inc., have just celebrated 20 years of conducting auctions of horse drawn coaches, carriages, sleighs, horse-related equipment, and collectibles at their auction facilities, two miles east of Intercourse and throughout the U.S. and Canada.

In their quest to keep the horse industry alive and promote horse-related events, the idea of an Equine Trade Fair emerged in 1991, in conjunction with a two-day carriage auction and specialized all-breed driving horse and pony auction. Because of the tremendous success the first year, the Martins are moving ahead to organize and plan another successful event in 1992.

Included in the admission to the Trade Fair, speakers include:

• Joan Embrey - A Goodwill

Ambassador of the San Diego Zoo and Wild Animal Park, she is well known for her frequent guest appearances with her animal friends on the "Tonight Show."

• Bill Long - A horse trainer for driving horses and known throughout the world as a leading international team driver (horses). He has participated in competition with Prince Philip of England.

• Dr. William Tiznick - Professor of equine nutrition at Ohio State University, he is also a speaker on equine fallacies and nutrition.

Events will include a carriage drive through the Pennsylvania

Dutch country with more than 50 horses hitched to all types of carriages.

For additional information, contact Larry or Paul Martin at (717) 768-8108.

Cooperative Appoints Manager

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Paul Hornbaker, chairman of the board of directors of the Cumberland Valley Cooperative Association, has announced the appointment of Rene L. Lavoie as the general manager of the cooperative.

Lavoie has been the manager of the cooperative's feed and fertilizer plant near Shippensburg since February 1991.

A native of Vermont, Lavoie is a graduate of Kansas State University, where he received a bachelor of science degree in feed technology and operations. He has been employed in the field as a production superintendent, operations manager, and general manager. He has served on the board of directors and as president of the Eastern Federation of Feed merchants, as well as a representative to the Council of Agricultural Organizations, a New York State group.

Lavoie resides in Hopewell Township with his wife Charity. They are parents of four grown children.

The Cooperative is farmer-owned with branches in Shippensburg, Chambersburg, Longsdorf, Mechanicsburg, and Newville and has been supplying quality feed, seed, and fertilizer to members and the public for 62 years. The modern plant facilities enable the cooperative to custom formulate, grind, and mix feeds and to custom blend fertilizers to meet the needs of today's more scientific farmers.

Lavoie replaces Henry A. Zajac as general manager. Zajac is retiring after eight years with the cooperative.

MDA Open House Bigger, Better

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The annual "Open House" at the Maryland Department of Agriculture is going to be bigger and better than ever with new things for the public to see and do on Saturday, March 21. Last year, the event drew more than 5,000 visitors.

As in the past, the event will start off with the "Maryland With Pride" 10-K Run set up by the Annapolis Striders, starting at 9 a.m.

Again this year will be laboratory tours in the Department's new wing featuring labs that do work on animal feeds, household cleaning products, fertilizers, pesticides and even a lab which checks weights down to a millionth of a pound for accuracy.

Farming means food and there will be no shortage of cooking and food sampling demonstrations put on by many Maryland food commodity organizations ranging from apples to seafood and fish farming.

There will also be a number of activities for children: a farm coloring contest, face painting, and a petting zoo stocked with fuzzy, furry, and friendly animals.

The event will be held at the department's headquarters building, 50 Harry S Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401. Additional information can be obtained by contacting Desiree Mundell at (410) 841-5770.

Mercer Corn Day Held

MERCER (Mercer Co.)— The annual Mercer County Corn Day was recently held at the Mercer County Vo-Tech School, Rt. 19 north of Mercer. This education program was sponsored by Mercer County Seed and Fertilizer dealers.

Dr. Patrick Lipps, Plant Pathologist, Ohio State University, was guest speaker for the General Session. Lipps' topic was "Diseases of Corn". He stressed strongly that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. When it comes to corn diseases there are a few things we can do, these are the most important decisions you make before planting your corn crop to maintain disease control: Crop Rotation, Plow-Down Infected Residues, and Plant Resistant Hybrids or Varieties. Some of the diseases we are having problems with today are: Stalk Rot (Gibberella), Northern Leaf Blight, Gibberella Ear Rot, Stewart Bacterial Leaf Blight. A major yield loss of corn production may be attributed to Stalk Rot, to maintain control of this disease, you should select well adapted hybrid seed for your area with leaf blight resistance, attain fertile ground (N-K), maintain insect control, till to bury residues and to continually rotate crops.

Many of the dealers had displays with available literature. (Doebler's Hybrid, Beachlay-Hardy Seed, Andover Crop Service, Agricultural Soil Conservation Service, Hoopes Fertilizer, Muncey Chief, Hybrid Seed, NC+, Pennsylvania Crop Management Assoc., Cargill Hybrid Seed, Lakeview Fertilizer, Ciba-Giegy Seed, Wilclan Farm Systems, Farm Credit Service, Wetsel Seed Co., Northrup King Seed & Service, and Pioneer Hi-Bred.)

Break out sessions were held following the general session which consisted of: "Comparing Presenting the Five-Acre Corn Club Awards was Tom Zundel, Extension Agent/crops. Several Mercer County farmers received this award:

Adams Co. Membership Campaign Begins

CHAMBERSBURG (Adams Co.) — "The 1991-92 membership campaign has begun with a bang," said co-chairman of the Adams County Farmers' Association membership campaign, John Hess of Gettysburg. At a recent checkup meeting, the total memberships collected to date has increased over last year's amount by nearly 15 percent.

"The farming community realizes that we need to get back to the grassroots, to the solid rock foundation of our peers and those that were leaders before us. Hence, membership in an organization such as ACFA is so important in these times of recession," said co-chairman Elmer Smith of New Oxford.

The Adams County Farmers' Association is a general farm organization with 820 members to date. It is affiliated with the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

The membership campaign co-chairmen Hess and Smith urged their team captains and workers to contact every farm family in the county for membership in the local association to reach this year's goal of 868.

"Membership is the lifeblood of the organization," said President Dave Wenk. "The membership is responsible for the development of local policies which are positions for the lobbying effort by PFA."

The county unit is active in community affairs and works for favorable legislation for the rural community. It also offers business services to its member families.

In addition to the collection of dues, a membership incentive drawing was held at the recent checkup meeting. The winners of cash awards are $75 to Randy and Ricky Kime; $50 to Michael Sharer; and $25 to W.D. Wentzel. Each winner will receive his award at the annual spring meeting to be held on March 9 at the Mt. Joy Parish House. Any member in the association was eligible for the drawing as long as their dues were in the hands of the membership processor or team captain/worker by December 31, 1991.

Anyone interested in learning more about the association should contact President Dave Wenk at (717) 677-9553 or John Hess, at (717) 334-8553.

So You Want To Sell The Farm?

WILLIAMSPORT (Lycoming Co.) — On March 17, at 7:30 p.m., Lycoming County will conduct a workshop for those individuals thinking about selling their farm.

The session will be held at the Montoursville Presbyterian Church (located north of Broad Street from the Weis Market at the corner of Elm and Walnut Streets). According to Lehan Power, farm management agent for Penn State, this educational program will be for those farmers that are thinking about selling all or part of the farm.

Power stated that many farmers might not be selling the entire farm, just their loose property and cattle and holding onto the ground. Others may be selling off just part of the farm or a few building lots. This meeting will cover various ways of selling the farm.

The topics covered will include capital gains, establishing basis, installment sales, land contract, owner financing, sales within the family, depreciation recapture on personal and real property and tax planning when selling a farm.

This meeting, according to Power, is being held at this time of year so that farmers thinking about selling this year can still do some tax planning for the 1992 tax year.

Time will be spend on sales and farm transfers within the family. Can you transfer the family farm for one dollar? Should you? Should you sell or transfer the farm during your life or pass it on to the next generation via a will?

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Deere Honors Young Farmers

MOLINE, Ill. — The familiar color of John Deere-green was a welcome mid-winter respite for farmers from across America who convened in Moline for The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce 36th National Outstanding Young Farmer (NOYF) Awards Congress.

The NOYF award is given annually to four of the nation's top farmers ages 21-35.

Deere & Company, manufacturer of John Deere equipment and implements, has sponsored the program 16 years. The U.S. Junior Chamber administers the program.

The 1992 NOYF winners are:

- Philip Nelson, 34, of Seneca, Ill., who began farming in high school when his father gave him two sows. He now oversees a herd of 1,600. Nelson is a former American Farm Bureau Federation national outstanding farmer.

- Eddie Velarde, 31, of Velarde, N.M., who is sole proprietor of a 37-acre fruit operation. He farms land which has been in his family since 1598. Velarde pioneered the use of windmills in his area.

- Gregg Swanson, 34, of Hoople, N.D., who is vice president of his family's 6,080 acre potato, sugarbeet, and wheat operation. He was named 1990 Red River Valley Frito Lay "Grower of The Year." He also developed a 24-row rotary hoe, which weeds in or between rows.

- Scott Sechler, 32, of Strausstown, Pa., who owns a major poultry operation. He began farming and raising chickens in 1972 with FFA projects on the family farm. He produces a Natural Chicken brand — chicken grown without the use of by-products, antibiotics, chemicals, or growth promoters.

Master of ceremonies for the event was WGN-TV's "U.S. Farm Report" host Orion Samuelson. He joined U.S. Junior Chamber President Greg Thomes and Deere & Company President David Stowe Jr. to present the awards.

State Jaycee organizations select one nominee after a lengthy judging process. Winners need not be Jaycees. They are selected for their progress in agricultural career, conservation practices, and contributions to community.

Check Conservation Plan Now

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The beginning of a new year signals that spring planting is near.

John Akers, district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) in Franklin County, said the winter months are the ideal time for farmers to check their conservation plan to decide which practices must be installed this year.

Under the 1985 and 1990 Farm Bills, farmers must implement their conservation plan by January 1, 1995 to remain eligible for most U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) farm program benefits.

"Staying in compliance means staying on schedule," said Akers. "It means applying the practices that are called for in the conservation plan each year."

Most conservation plans outline a specific crop rotation or crop residue management method designed to reduce soil erosion on highly erodible cropland. If the farmer does not follow the plan, he or she may lose benefits such as commodity price supports, agricultural conservation program payments, disaster payments, and Farmers Home Administration loans.

Crop residue management and cover cropping are practices that require planning, Akers said. This winter is the best time for farmers to evaluate their tillage plans for spring. The type of tillage equipment and sequence of tillage operations will affect the amount of surface residue left at planting. Farmers may also want to consider the purchase or lease of special tillage or planting equipment to be used this spring.

A brochure, entitled "Reap Profits from Residue," contains residue management tips that could be useful to Franklin County farmers. This brochure is available from SCS field offices.

Akers said about 95 percent of the conservation plans in the county include crop residue management.

Robert Heidecker, state resource conservationist for SCS in Harrisburg, said farmers who have difficulty implementing their plan because of special circumstances such as weather conditions, changes in the farm operations or increased herd size, should contact SCS.

"There may be alternatives for farmers who need to change planned conservation practices, but they need to check with SCS beforehand so they don't jeopardize their eligibility," he said.

In addition, SCS is checking five percent of the conservation compliance plans each year to ensure farms are staying on schedule.

Farmers who want to install practices on their own should consult with SCS personnel. Find out SCS' standards and specifications for the practices before applying them.

Contact your local Soil Conservation Service office early for an appointment to review your plan and schedule assistance. The Franklin County office is at 550 Cleveland Avenue, Chambersburg, Pa. 17201, (717) 264-7013.

Alka-Culture

RUMEN BUFFER

Ideal for your high producers!

Alka-Culture rumen buffer, along with good management, can help maintain a healthy acid-base balance in the rumen, help cows stay on feed and support good milk and butterfat production and body condition. Cows produce buffer in saliva — but on today's high-energy, lowfiber rations they chew cuds less and produce less saliva than on higher-fiber rations. Further, ensiled feeds contain considerable acid. It often adds up to a need for Alka-Culture rumen buffer.

CONTAINS...

Sodium bicarbonate helps maintain proper rumen pH.

Magnesium oxide works with bicarbonate as a buffer — also helps cows utilize acetate in butterfat production.

Whey, a natural buffer, also provides energy for rumen bacteria.

Producers are sure to enjoy the world-class pork-specific trade show that will feature the latest technology from more than 500 companies and swine breed shows and educational seminars.

Consumers will delight in the Great Pork BarbeQlossal™ barbecue competition, complete with free samples of mouth-watering pork barbecue, sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health. Everyone is welcome to learn about the new nutritional profile of fresh pork at Elanco Animal Health's Pork Product Showcase.

"World Pork Expo is not just an event. It is an experience that pork producers would have a hard time duplicating without attending hundreds of seminars and trade shows throughout the year," according to World Pork Expo Manager Gary Slater.

The 1992 World Pork Expo will offer a variety of new activities for both previous and first-time attendees. A new display is designed to increase producer awareness of environmental issues currently facing the pork industry.

"This event will give producers some ideas and tools to use in dealing with the growing public interest in environmental matters and the environmental challenges that will affect pork producers in the future," said Slater.

Producers will be able to visit with experts about environmental laws and see demonstrations on new environmental technology and management techniques at the display, which is sponsored by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. with assistance from "PORK '92"

Another new Expo event will be the Lean Value Challenge, where judges will evaluate six market hogs entered by pork producers for lean content and lean value. This National Association of Swine Records sponsored challenge is designed to educate producers about the benefits of lean value marketing and the new technologies available to measure lean. The owner of the group of animals with the leanest profile will receive one year's free use of a Featherlite low-profile trailer.

Making its second appearance at Expo will be the industry progress display, which focuses on the industry's new producer education efforts. Information on the Pork Quality Assurance Program and animal welfare issues are among the topics producers can expect to be featured in this MSD Agvet-sponsored event.

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

VAN DALE®

Dependability through Quality

Engineered & Designed By Van Dale...

ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND

BALED HAY CAN NOW BE MIXED

Baled hay can now be processed into a condition suitable for mixing with other TMR materials in all types of mixers: auger, tumble or reel type. With the Van Dale Bale Processor, you can incorporate baled hay into your ration with less stress on your mixer and be assured of getting the maximum benefit from both your hay and your mixer.

ELIMINATES THE DUST AND MESS

The Van Dale Bale Processor uses a hydraulic ram to push the hay bale through a set of hardened steel knives slicing it into a more mixable 4" to 6" average length material without pulverizing the fragile materials in the bale.

FEED THE LEAVES-NOT JUST STEMS

Don't let your valuable feed nutrients disappear in a cloud of dust. Unlike a conventional bale chopper or tub grinder with high speed cutting knives which turn leaves into powder, the Van Dale Bale Processor retains up to 97% of the valuable leaf portion of your hay to be incorporated into the TMR ration.
